

Mass rally Saturday to protest court's abortion OK

by BARRY SIGALE
The mobilization of outraged Roman Catholics — supported by protestors from every other denomination — has begun for Saturday's mass rally objecting to the Supreme Court's stand on abortion.

Using the pulpit to scold and cajole the high court on its recent decision to legalize abortion in the early stages of pregnancy, referred to by many as the "legalization of murder," Chicago and suburban priests have been urging their parishioners to publically voice their objections to the ruling.

In what may become a bigger and more volatile issue than the church's controversial stand on divorce, the two sides have been clearly drawn.

ON THE ONE hand is the Supreme Court, buoyed by the vocal support of such pro-abortion reform organizations as the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecology and other medical groups as well as women's rights.

They argue that it may be in the best interests of the expectant mother to terminate her pregnancy in its early stages, that for either psychological or physical reasons the mother's fetus should not be allowed to become a human being.

On the other hand is the Catholic Church, supported by various "right to life" organizations and others, which claims abortion is not morally right, that the fetus has the same rights as any human being and that the mother has no right to destroy it.

THE CHICAGO Archdiocese of the Catholic Church is now supporting, and, indeed, encouraging its members, to join the march and rally Saturday. The demonstration is being planned by the Illinois Right to Life Committee, Illinois Citizens Concerned For Life and Birthright.

Activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. in front of the Federal Building at 219 S. Dearborn and culminate at the civic center. Among those expected to speak is John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago.

SINCE LAST week's statement by the Committee for Pro-Life Affairs of the National Council of Catholic Bishops that although the decision "may be legally permissible it is still morally wrong, and no court opinion can change the law of God prohibiting the taking of innocent human life." Several local priests have followed with the same theories.

Rev. Donald Duffy of St. Mary's Church in Buffalo Grove contrasted the Supreme Court's decision with President Nixon's peace achievements, both matters having a direct bearing on life.

He said it was "most difficult to reconcile two days which follow back to back," one the truce in Vietnam, which meant that the killing of American servicemen would end, and the other the court's abortion ruling, which ignores the right to life.

"In its (the court's) decision, it said that it is illegal for the state to place any restrictions on mother during the first three months of her pregnancy. This decision rests in the hands of her and her physician. What about the right to life of the fetus? If we say nothing about the biological fact that there is life after conception do we make Gods out of physicians?" (Continued on Page 5)

Gill opposes unit district — if it 'hurts us'

by WANDALYN RICE
Supt. Kenneth Gill of Wheeling-Elk Grove Dist. 21 has vowed he will stop Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 from forming a unit school district if it would result in financial harm to High School Dist. 214.

At a meeting of the Walt Whitman PTA in Wheeling Monday Gill said, "I'm damn well biased against a unit district under the present system," and added that he will oppose Dist. 59 if it tries to take more tax base than it takes students from Dist. 214.

Dist. 59 is now in the midst of a feasibility study on forming a unit district, which would combine all elementary and high schools under a single school board in that area.

Preliminary figures have indicated that a unit district composed of all of Dist. 59 and including Elk Grove and Forest View high schools from Dist. 214 would take about 23 per cent of the students from Dist. 214 and would also take about 37 per cent of the tax base.

tem in the Northwest suburbs.

"In that unit district, kindergarten and first grade kids didn't get any attention or money. It was the high schools, with their bands and football teams, that got everything. You'd be amazed at the fanaticism that built up. The only way I got a new junior high school was because they built a new high school and gave the younger kids the old one," he said.

GILL ALSO took a swipe at a proposal by Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher that a unit district be formed within the village limits of Schaumburg, removing that area from Elementary Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211. The proposal, he said, will only help Atcher in "becoming a pseudo-Mayor Daley."

Gill also said he will oppose any move to make High School Dist. 214 a unit district by absorbing all the feeder elementary school districts. The 214-wide unit would have more than 50,000 students and, Gill said, "Any district that would go over 50,000 student population takes on all the characteristics of a centralized state with no communication with its people."

Gill admitted that under present Illinois law unit school districts are entitled to more state aid than dual districts, but said he believes that inequity will be ended either by legislation or by court decisions.

DEAN MACK, a representative of State School Supt. Michael Bakalla's office of school reorganization, another participant on the panel, cautioned Gill about being too confident of defeating a unit district try in Dist. 59.

Under the law, Mack said, persons who petition to have a unit district formed can go to court if their petition is denied by the county and state school superintendents. However, he said, the law does not provide for a judicial review for opponents of a unit district if a petition is approved and a referendum held.

Mack said the law is currently being challenged in a case involving the Bensenville schools, but added, "The way the law is written, dual districts are definitely vulnerable."

WHITE PINE DITCH in Buffalo Grove has bank, on the left here, is steep and dangerous for children. Residents on the east bank complain about erosion, and residents all along the area complain that it is an eyesore. The village and the park district are currently involved in finding a solution to some, if not all of the problems.

New lawyer wants to study case

Two-year-old lawsuit again delayed

A ruling on a lawsuit filed nearly two years ago against Wheeling by Prospect Heights residents has again been delayed — this time so a new lawyer for the plaintiffs can become acquainted with the case.

Don Kreger, attorney who has been representing the Prospect Heights group known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, said yesterday he is withdrawing from the case at the request of the state's attorney's office. Kreger said he had been appointed a special assistant to the state's attorney's office so he could take the case known as "The People vs. Wheeling." He was appointed under former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan.

"I received a call saying that the current state's attorney (C. Bernard Carey) is against special assistants assigned to state cases," Kreger said. "I will turn the file over to the state's attorney."

Kreger said Assistant State's Atty. Paul Biebel would probably handle the case which has been continued in Cook County Circuit Court until March 19. Biebel said yesterday he would probably be assigned to the case and added it would not be dropped. He said he could not say any more on the matter.

THIS IS THE TENTH continuance in the suit, filed in March 1971, charging that Wheeling illegally annexed the 40 acres near Wheeling Road north of Camp McDonald Road. Previous requests for continuances came from Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer and Arnold Liebling, owner of the property who has intervened in the suit.

The suit contends Wheeling's annexation of the site was illegal because the land is not contiguous to the village. A Circuit Court judge's ruling in November, 1971, agreed with the group's contention. Wheeling attorneys then filed a motion saying the annexation should be allowed anyway because the Prospect Heights group waited too long before filing. The suit was filed 44 days, after the annexation became official, Kreger said.

Kreger said he had "no idea" how his withdrawal will affect the case. Currently Judge Robert Downing is hearing the suit. He is the third judge to do so.

School caucus still accepting applications

The screening committee of the Dist. 21 General Caucus still is accepting applications for endorsement.

Interested residents who wish to seek caucus support for the school board election in April should make arrangements this week, because screening interviews will be conducted Saturday.

Applicants should contact committee chairman Gary Burke, 537-8323, to arrange an appointment. Caucus delegates will meet Feb. 14 to hear each candidate and vote on recommendation of no more than four persons for the three available board seats in the election.

Gill opposes unit district — if it 'hurts us'

by WANDALYN RICE

Supt. Kenneth Gill of Wheeling-Elk Grove Dist. 21 has vowed he will stop Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 from forming a unit school district if it would result in financial harm to High School Dist. 214.

At a meeting of the Walt Whitman PTA in Wheeling Monday Gill said, "I'm damn well biased against a unit district under the present system," and added that he will oppose Dist. 59 if it tries to take more tax base than it takes students from Dist. 214.

Dist. 59 is now in the midst of a feasibility study on forming a unit district, which would combine all elementary and high schools under a single school board in that area.

Preliminary figures have indicated that a unit district composed of all of Dist. 59 and including Elk Grove and Forest View high schools from Dist. 214 would take about 28 per cent of the students from Dist. 214 and would also take about 37 per cent of the tax base.

AREA SCHOOL districts now are organized as "dual districts," and the elementary and high schools are under separate school boards.

"I don't care what Dist. 59 does," Gill said. "I dare them to try to form a unit district that would take that much assessed value from Dist. 214. If Dist. 214 doesn't take them to court, we will."

However, Gill added that if Dist. 59 proposed a unit district that would not hurt Dist. 214 "that's fine with me. I'm tired of fooling around with those people. I think the move to a unit district down there is based on their parochialism and desire to go their own way."

In the remarks made in conjunction with a panel discussion on the subject of unit districts, Gill also attacked the assumption that unit school districts can improve the quality of education by providing a continuous program.

Gill said he worked in a downstate unit school district as an assistant superintendent and communication between elementary and high schools was worse there than it is under the dual school system in the Northwest suburbs.

"In that unit district, kindergarten and first grade kids didn't get any attention or money. It was the high schools, with their bands and football teams, that got everything. You'd be amazed at the fanaticism that built up. The only way I got a new junior high school was because they built a new high school and gave the younger kids the old one," he said.

New lawyer wants to study case

Two-year-old lawsuit again delayed

A ruling on a lawsuit filed nearly two years ago against Wheeling by Prospect Heights residents has again been delayed — this time so a new lawyer for the plaintiffs can become acquainted with the case.

Don Kreger, attorney who has been representing the Prospect Heights group known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, said yesterday he is withdrawing from the case at the request of the state's attorney's office. Kreger said he had been appointed a special assistant to the state's attorney's office so he could take the case known as "The People vs. Wheeling." He was appointed under former State's Atty. "I received a call saying that the current state's attorney (C. Bernard Carey)

Walker urges 'partnership' in government

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Urging partnership among the branches of government and again promising no new taxes, Gov. Daniel Walker addressed the Illinois General Assembly for the first time in his "State of the State" message.

As expected, Walker advocated the use of state motor fuel tax funds to help mass transit districts — a plan that already had drawn heavy downstate criticism before the speech was delivered.

The governor also urged, without elaboration, legislative action to require criminal trials within 60 days after arrest; provide more money for primary and secondary education in Illinois; strengthen the state ethics law, and provide reporters with protection from jail if they refuse to divulge their news sources.

"We want to deliver the best services at the least, possible cost to the people of Illinois," Walker said near the start of his speech.

"To do that, and do it well, we cannot have one-man rule. We cannot have war between the branches of government. We shall have to do that which our constitution mandates and that which is best for you, for me and for the people of Illinois. We shall have to be partners."

HE RETURNED to the topic again later, pointing out an "imbalance" among branches of federal government. "We do not want that imbalance in Springfield," he said. "I believe in legislative as well as executive initiative."

His comments indicated a concern that intraparty feuds in the House — the product of a bitter speakership fight — might hamper action. Only hours before his address, for example, House factions were squabbling about the rules that will govern their debates for the next two years.

Walker said, "One of the lessons of the past decade was that government cannot do everything..."

Consequently, he said, his response to the state's needs "will not be the traditional political approach of unveiling massive blueprints which promise to solve the great social problems of our time."

THAT APPROACH was borne out by the rest of his speech, which touched only lightly on a few specific proposals.

They included a repetition of his pledge not to raise taxes. "The state's present sources of revenue are adequate to meet the needs of Illinois. There will be no tax increase and no additional taxes," Walker said.

By far the most controversial aspect of Walker's address was his proposal to use state motor fuel taxes to help mass trans-sit districts, including the Chicago Transit Authority.

Daniel Walker

Such a plan easily could run up a tab of more than $25 million. The CTA alone expects a 1973 deficit of $42 million, not counting local aid. To cover a $25 million statewide deficit, the state would have to earmark a half cent of its share of the 7½-cent tax for mass transit — a level experts said would have a "serious impact" on downstate road projects.

HOUSE DEMOCRATIC Leader Clyde Choate of Anna, asked before the speech whether he could support such a plan, replied, "All I need say is that downstaters have always jealously guarded that fund."

A downstate Republican, Clarence Neff of Stronghurst, head of the House Transportation Committee, criticized the plan more freely.

Helping the CTA, Neff said, should be "a direct obligation of Chicago and Cook County. I personally will oppose this."

Others, mainly Cook County legislators, said they would support the plan, which would aid residents of their districts. But some, including assistant House Democratic Leader Gerald Shea of Riverside, were surprised Walker even considered the controversial idea.

"You'll never see that proposal coming from the governor's office," Shea said last Friday night.

SUGGESTIONS to ease the sales tax on food and medicine are expected to meet with more general approval. There have been pleas for years that the tax be lifted or returned to those who pay it on grounds it discriminates against the poor segments of the population.

Sen. Stanley Weaver, an Urbana Republican, already has introduced legislation which would return the tax money to individuals according to a sliding scale based on family size and income.

Walker's first address to the General Assembly also was spiced by uncertainty over how he plans to work with that body during his term. Many observers think the governor will gear his programs to popular acceptance and then use their popularity as a level to get legislative approval.

Walker has said he will make wide use of the executive order to meet his goals.

His decision to hold his inauguration three weeks ago out of doors in a ceremony open to anyone, rather than before a joint legislative session, lent fuel to those theories.

Today last day for Center donations

Won't you help?

Won't you help? The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center urgently needs our support if it is to continue serving families in North-west suburbs. A dollar sent to the Herald Center Fund, P. O. Checks should be made payable to the Salvation Army Community Counseling Center, and names of all persons contributing $1 or more will be published in the Herald.

Save The Center!

COMMUNITY COUNSELING CENTER

Today is your last chance to donate a dollar or more to the Herald Center Fund.

The emergency fund appeal is being sponsored by the Herald in an effort to help The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center reduce its 1972 operating deficit and maintain its services to suburban families.

With one day remaining in the campaign, a total 995 Herald readers had contributed $5,484.50 through yesterday.

Contributions may still be sent to Herald Center Fund, P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Checks should be made payable to Salvation Army Community Counseling Center.

Names of persons donating $1 or more have been published in the Herald, and the final list of donors will appear in Monday's editions.

"WE ARE MOST appreciative of the splendid response to our call for help," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor and publisher. "The task of trying to prevent family ills and to cure them is a tremendous one, but the support being given the Center by our readers demonstrates the extent to which our communities recognize the need and demand for family counseling services in this area."

The Center is part of The Salvation Army Family Service Division. It provides service to individuals and families in Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Prospect Heights, Schaumburg and Wheeling.

A full-time, professional staff of counselors and caseworkers helps suburban families face and solve family problems in order to preserve healthy family life. These include marital difficulties, personality problems, unwed motherhood, falling child-parent relationships, teenage delinquency, drug abuse, alcoholism, problems of the aged and others.

Four to five cents was the average milk price increase last month, and this week's increase is expected to average four to five cents at retail levels, Meyer estimated.

THE COST of producing milk is continuing a steady climb, according to John Brookman, a representative of the American Dairy Association in Rosemont. Despite the higher prices tagged for dairy farmers in the current price increase, Brookman added, "Unfortunately the price increases do not always go to the farmer." Increases are usually tied to processing and distribution costs, he said.

Another milk price increase could come in April, when USDA will announce farm support programs. Although Agriculture Secretary Butz has hinted that supports may be curtailed, Brookman said an increase is expected.

Brookman cites the decreasing number of independent farmers as an indication of financial problems. In the last 12 years, their ranks dwindled from 800,000 to 300,000 down to 300,000 farmers, he said.

will go up 2½ cents a gallon. This includes a surcharge by the "farmers bargaining agent," said Wahlstrom.

This agent turns out to be the Central Milk Producers Cooperative, of which AMPI is a cooperative member. AMPI includes some 9,000 dairy farmers in northern Illinois and Wisconsin. Central Milk Producers membership ranges from Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico.

Several dairy industry representatives in the Chicago area claim that this superpool surcharge will account for the greatest share of this week's price boost. Wahlstrom would not specify what percentage of this surcharge is allocated to finance the Central Milk Producers Cooperative.

A RECENT study by a University of Illinois dairy marketing expert points to retailers as another culprit in milk price hikes. Roland W. Bartlett, University of Illinois professor of agricultural economics emeritus, estimated that the markup on milk in 48 cities he surveyed is 7.9 cents a quart, or a 41 per cent markup. Chicago is among the cities in his survey.

He contends that the markup on milk should be lower than the average markup on all food items, because of its rapid turnover. Bartlett pegs an average markup on all food items, or the amount added to prices to compensate for operating and handling costs, is 19 per cent.

This is discounted by Newby, citing Jewel's markup as an example. He said the average markup for items in the food stores is 20-22 per cent. "There is not as great a discrepancy as indicated in the University of Illinois study," he said of the company's milk markup. He would not specify the milk markup percentage, however.

The University of Illinois study must be based on the difference between raw milk prices and retail prices, he said, of the 41 per cent markup report.

Lloyd Meyer, president of Meyer Bros. Dairy, Inc., in Arlington Heights, said he is passing along the added cost he will be charged by suppliers this week. His cost will be raised more than three cents a gallon. Meyer's customers will see a four

Milk prices may rise again this week

by LEA TONKIN

Bottled milk prices probably will swing upward again this week, the second time in the past month.

Three to four cents a gallon is the likely price boost, say some dairy industry experts. This follows on the heels of a three to four cents a gallon price boost a month ago.

Supermarket spokesmen are keeping mum on the prospects of milk price boosts later this week. The usual procedure is to raise prices, then make any announcements.

A spokesman for the Dominick's food store chain, for example, said any price increases they experience as a result of their supplier price increases would have to be reflected at the retail level. No comment on price hikes this week was available.

No estimation of a price boost this week is possible at this time, said Bill Newby, public relations director for the Jewel Food Stores. "I wouldn't want to preclude the possibility of a price increase," said Newby.

AN INCREASE in the price paid to dairy farmers per hundredweight of milk is a partial reason for expected milk price increases on Thursday, Feb. 1. This is when the Class I (bottled milk) prices are adjusted to reflect a change in the Class II milk (used in production of cheese and other dairy products) last December.

The differential between Class I and Class II milk prices is tabulated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) based on Class II price structure two months earlier, explained Dick Emery, administrative assistant in the department's Chicago regional office.

The next Class I price change, effective March 1, will be announced Feb. 3. It will reflect January Class II prices plus the differential.

AN ADDED boost in milk prices is accounted for in the superpool charge, levied by a large dairy industry cooperative organization. As reported by John Wahlstrom, marketing department of the Associated Milk Producers Inc., milk prices charged by producers to dealers

Group to consider Kildeer School plan

The community relations committee formed to find a solution as to what should be done with Kildeer Countryside School in Dist. 96 will have its second public meeting at 8 tomorrow night at the school. Residents of the district are urged to attend.

The committee is considering what should be done with the school. The group is made up of nine residents and three members of the school board.

'Oklahoma' cast at Stevenson High

Major roles for the production of "Oklahoma" this spring at Adlai Stevenson High School have been announced by William Misk, director of the musical.

Jan Horvath, freshman, and Brad Owen, senior, will portray Laurie and Curly. Dennis Simpson was selected for the part of Jud.

Other cast members are Marsha Dush, Greg Frantz, Tracy Tobin, Lynn Sommerfield, Glen Wilgus, Pat Goodwin, Ray Cullen and Jim Lindgren.

Others are Chris Frantz, Andy Schnable, Laura LaPlaca, Amy Borgstrom, Lori Sturgeon, Ellen Breslau, Cindy Anderson, Bret Owen, Peter Schulenberg, Bill Holden, Mike Topel and Jack Maloney.

The musical will be presented April 27, 28 and 29 in the Stevenson auditorium.

Winter baseball signup tomorrow

Registration for a winter baseball batting program will begin tomorrow at the Wheeling Park District community building at Heritage Park.

With the help of an automatic pitching machine, baseball enthusiasts 16 years or younger will be able to work on their swings. Program instructor Gil Measa is a former freelance scout for three major league baseball teams and is a specialist in coaching hitting.

The program will begin Feb. 10 and continue for the next four Saturday mornings at Heritage Park. Instruction will begin at 9 a.m. and run for three hours. There is a $5 registration fee for the program.

Registration will continue at Heritage Park through Saturday and will be at Jack London Junior High School on Sunday.

Voter registration to close March 5

The county clerk's office has notified Wheeling officials that voter registration at the village hall will close for the upcoming April elections March 5.

It had formerly been announced that registration would close on Feb. 27 to allow for the township and the village elections.

Village Clerk Evelyn Diens said revised election laws probably accounted for the extended registration period. She said the county clerk is presently checking the legality of closing registration for village elections at the same time it closes for township elections.

Free-throw contest planned Saturday

The Wheeling Park District is sponsoring a free-throw basketball contest from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at Jack London Junior High School.

Four different age groups, ranging from 8 to 18 years, will compete. The top three throwers in each division will be given awards.

Paramedic promotion campaign begins

The Buffalo Grove firemen are putting posters and handouts in local businesses and public buildings to promote the suburban paramedic program.

Officially titled the "Mobile Intensive Care" network, the program has been in operation since Dec. 1 of last year. Since its inception the Buffalo Grove paramedics have responded to more than 20 trauma cases.

The new bright yellow posters explain the program in brief and give residents the telephone number they should use in case of emergency. It also contains a sketch showing the Northwest suburbs that are taking part in the program.

The yellow handouts also give a brief resume of the program and answer the 10 most asked questions in connection with the program.

Opponents in Strong Street battle await decision

by LYNN ASINOF
A News Analysis

Residents in the W. Strong Street area are waiting to learn whether they have the right to maintain the character of their present neighborhood. Developer Victor Smigel is waiting to see if he will be able to proceed with his plans to build apartments in the area.

Testimony in the week-long Strong Street area zoning case ended Monday, and the residents, Smigel and the Village of Wheeling now must wait for the judge to rule on the "reasonableness" of the village's decision to rezone 47 lots in the area for six-flat apartment buildings. That decision is expected Feb. 9.

During the course of the trial, the residents' attorney, John Burke, repeatedly tried to show that the residents have established a neighborhood that they do not want broken up by multi-family development.

TO PROVE that the village was unreasonable in its rezoning of the property, Burke argued that the multi-family development would decrease the value of neighboring single-family homes. Witnesses for the plaintiffs testified that the apartments would generate large numbers of school-aged children and create a traffic problem.

Burke charged that the present rezoning was spot zoning, which he said was illegal. He introduced evidence showing that the village's master plan called for high-density, single-family development in the area.

Attorneys representing the village, Smigel, and the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank said most of these arguments were irrelevant to the case. They said the only reason for the court to reverse the village zoning decision would be if the court found the decision to be totally unreasonable.

If the court upholds the zoning decision, the village would benefit in several ways. First, it would provide a way to bring water and sewer lines into the area at no expense to the village. This would allow the land to be developed, which in turn would produce revenue for the village through building permits, occupancy permits and higher real estate tax revenue.

ATTORNEY JACK SEGEL, representing the village, argued that the fact that Smigel's development would bring water and sewer lines to the area was sufficient justification for the rezoning. He said the Strong Street area is presently unsuitable for any development unless water and sewer lines are brought in.

Segel also disputed the contentions of the plaintiffs. He argued that the area is not predominantly a single-family neighborhood, but rather is 70 per cent vacant land. He offered this lack of development as proof that the land is unsuitable for single-family homes in its present condition.

Witnesses for the defense testified that while single-family development was theoretically possible, the expense of bringing utilities to the area would rule out this more costly form of development.

One defense witness even suggested that the present single-family homes in the area might be torn down and redeveloped for multi-family projects, thus eliminating the problem of mixing the two forms of development.

THE DEFENSE also presented witnesses who testified that fewer school-aged children would be generated by multi-family development than by single-family homes. They further stated that traffic produced by the apartments could be handled by the existing roads.

Segel argued that previous Illinois zoning cases determined that zoning in an area could not be restrictive simply because the neighbors favored that zoning. He said the over-all benefit to the village outweighed the concerns of individual property owners.

The residents also contended that there were defects in the zoning hearings because objectors to the project were not given time to present testimony from their land planner. Further, they said, the zoning board had not followed the village zoning ordinance because the hearings showed no findings of fact.

Segel argued that the residents were given the chance to have their expert testify before the village board when the trustees were considering the rezoning. He further stated that the village ordinance does not require specific fact findings on the part of the zoning board.

CITING several Illinois cases, Segel contended that the court cannot challenge the thinking of the people who made the zoning decision. For this reason, it appears the plaintiffs did not challenge the reasons why the village chose to rezone this property.

Attorney John M. Daley, representing Smigel, argued that his client had invested substantial money in the project under the assumption that the village zoning was valid. Daley said this investment of more than $50,000 was sufficient to override the residents' objections to the development.

Despite the emotional appeal of the residents' charges, the judge must make his decision on the legal technicalities of the case.

Police, school, service officials meet

Youth needs, woes probed

More than 100 representatives of area police departments, school districts and youth service agencies attended a regional seminar Monday to seek improved methods of cooperation and coordination in dealing with youth needs and problems.

The seminar was sponsored by the Cook County Sheriff's Youth Services Division. It was held at the Schaumburg Park District's Meineke Community Center, 20 E. Weathersfield Way.

Before the group was divided into "workshop" discussion teams, Douglas Anderson, supervisor of the Community Resources Department of the Cook County Juvenile Court, outlined new procedures in juvenile jurisdiction recently instituted through the new Unified Code of Corrections.

Anderson said because of the new procedures, new avenues of rehabilitation are available for youthful offenders within their own communities. He said the existence and effectiveness of youth counseling and rehabilitation agencies can have great bearing on how a juvenile case is handled in the courts.

ANDERSON SAID, for example, if the court finds effective service agencies operating in the community of a youthful offender, he can be placed on probation — reporting to that agency — rather than being sent to the Audy Home. Anderson said during such a probation the judge can "continue" the case through the probation period, and the juvenile may avoid carrying a criminal record.

A similar rehabilitation system could work in the case of a juvenile convicted of a crime, he said. The youth could be paroled back to his home community, reporting to a service agency or volunteer and avoid several months of detention following trial.

Because of those procedures and several other changes in the unified code, Anderson said, communities can aid in providing better rehabilitation techniques, thereby addressing prevention of youth crime and problems rather than cure alone.

"We have the code. What we need now are unified agencies which will work in a coordinated effort," Anderson said. "That is the only way to convince the young we have a fair and adequate system and that we are truly interested in their welfare."

Following Anderson's remarks, the group was divided into four workshop discussions on the state juvenile law and its implications for "the interacting roles of youth-serving agencies."

DISCUSSION TOPICS for the afternoon workshop sessions included: "Involving youth in the creation and operation of youth programs," "The problems of youth in fast growing suburbs," and "Alternatives to present state youth detention and rehabilitation centers."

James I. Gottreich, director of the sheriff's Youth Services Division, said the Northwest suburban area enjoys a substantial number of youth serving agencies. "What is needed now," he said, "is to get them all working together — to know what is available and to make use of them all."

The seminar Monday was for police, school, park and youth service representatives from Arlington Heights, Barrington, Barrington Hills, Bartlett, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Roselle, Schaumburg, South Barrington and streamwood.

It was the fifth such seminar in a series planned by the sheriff's department. Gottreich said a similar seminar for communities including Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Elk Grove Village is expected to be held sometime this month.

Sticker sales hours extended

Village residents who have not purchased their 1973 vehicle stickers have less than three weeks before a late charge of $5 is added to the regular purchase price.

To make it easier for residents to purchase stickers before the Feb. 15 deadline, the village business office has extended its hours. In addition to the regular weekday hours from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., the village office will be open on Feb. 2 and 9 from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

On Feb. 3 and 10, the office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Hours will be extended to 9 p.m. on Feb. 15.

Village Clerk Evelyn Diens said that in addition to the $5 late fee, residents who do not purchase stickers before the Feb. 15 deadline could receive tickets.

Stickers for automobiles cost $8, while those for motorcycles are $6. Recreational vehicle stickers are $5.

Annual Firemen's Ball set Feb. 17

The Wheeling Fire Department will sponsor its 76th annual Fireman's Ball Saturday, Feb. 17.

The "Sweetheart Ball," as it is called, will be at the Chevy Chase Country Club and those in attendance will dance to the tunes of the Jim Campbell orchestra and Life in the Big City. Music will begin at 9 p.m. and last until 1 a.m.

Persons attending also will have the opportunity to win many door prizes. The cost of the ball is $2 per person. Tickets can be purchased from any Wheeling fireman.

Hearing, vision tests set for preschoolers

Preschoolers living in the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 area can register for free hearing and vision tests next week.

Registration will be held Feb. 6 and 7 at Sullivan School, Palatine and Schoenbeck roads, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 2:30 p.m. At that time, mothers will be given a kit to prepare their youngsters for the actual tests which will be conducted Feb. 13 - 16. A child must be between 2½ and 5 years old to take the test.

The test is sponsored by SLIDES in conjunction with local agencies. The test will be given from the SLIDES mobile in the school parking lot from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

300 police chiefs at Towers

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood recently hosted a meeting of 300 police chiefs from around the state at a three-day convention at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

The semi-annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police featured a question and answer program with five member police chiefs and a team of law enforcement experts from the University of Illinois.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall was accepted into the association during the three-day session.

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson was named president of the association.

COMMITTEE discussions touched on a host of police problems including department administration, morale and police-community relations.

"We had a whole session on police administrative problems and there were a number of questions on this," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said. During the session the chiefs discussed the value of the new Arlington Heights-based Police Service Bureau, Case said.

The bureau is designed to provide assistance to chiefs in training, operational procedure, communications and other areas of administrative work.

"There were many good ideas presented as far as professionalization of police work," Case said. In a panel seminar sponsored by the Police Training Institute, Case said questions were shown on a screen followed by a discussion of the answers.

The panel discussion format was a new one which Case praised as being "very educational and worth while." He said the convention also included "a good display of equipment" being used in police work.

Lahti invited a close look at Harper

by WANDALYN RICE
When the Illinois Economic and Fiscal Commission began its study of the state's junior college system, Harper College Pres. Robert Lahti called its director to make sure Harper would be one of the colleges upon which the study would focus.

Later he heard that a member of the commission visitation team, while leaving one college, remarked to its president that the team was "going to visit those hotshots at Harper and see if they are doing half of what they say they are."

Given that background, Lahti says he is not too unhappy with the way Harper came out in the final study. In the chapter of the report on Harper the school is described as having a "management-oriented" administration and a strong evaluation system. The school is also praised for producing students who are successful in going on to college or getting jobs in their chosen field.

The tone of the over-all report, highly critical of the state's junior college system as a whole, does upset Lahti, however. And he also has answers for the "little digs" at Harper's size and administrative salaries that were included in its assessment.

The report, ordered by the legislature and overseen by commission director Mark Chadwin, charges junior colleges are generally failing to prepare students for four-year colleges and also have small percentages of students who complete vocational programs and get jobs in their field.

IN AN INTERVIEW last week, Lahti pointed out that the report faults the junior college system at the same time it uses data it admits may be incomplete, inaccurate or uncomparable. "When I was in graduate school," he said, "I was taught that if you had data like that, you didn't try to draw conclusions from it."

In addition, he said charges that the junior colleges are admitting unqualified students to programs that might lead eventually to degrees from four-year colleges are partly based on a misinterpretation of the role of the junior college. "One emphasis in a junior college is in preparing people for bachelor's degrees," he said, "but that's only a small part of the mission of a community college."

At the same time that the report criticizes junior colleges for admitting students with low test scores and low high school grades, Lahti added, the state's four-year colleges and universities are lowering admission requirements so they can bolster falling enrollments.

"The name of the game in Illinois is headcount and number of students," he said. "As long as the state is funding schools on that basis, it's going to be dog eat dog between the four-year colleges and the two-year colleges."

That point brought Lahti to another thing about the report that concerns him. Much of the data, he said, came from the University of Illinois — a school that likely has a vested interest in cutting down the junior college system to increase its chances for high amounts of state money.

In addition, comparisons of the costs per student of the state's colleges inevitably hurt the small, downstate colleges which cannot compete with larger institutions such as Harper in terms of efficiency, he said.

LAHTI ADMITTED that figures showing that only about 12 per cent of Harper's vocational students actually get degrees from full two-year programs "may be something that's not good and we should watch that closely." However, he added that some students do not complete degrees in two years because they only attend school part-time and others can get good jobs without the degrees so quit without completing the training.

Harper 2nd-campus plan suspended

by WANDALYN RICE
Harper College's plans for a second campus have been temporarily suspended by an action last week of the Illinois Junior College Board.

The junior college board told Harper officials Friday to hold up their plans to buy a second site in the district until the board's staff can study the enrollment ceilings it has placed on junior colleges.

The state's master plan for junior colleges states that schools should plan for a second campus before they reach an enrollment equivalent to 6,000 full-time students. Harper, with the equivalent of about 5,000 full-time students, began planning to acquire a second campus with the adoption of a master plan last fall.

The junior college board's staff will work with representatives of the Illinois Board of Higher Education to decide whether to stick by the enrollment ceiling cited in the master plan or whether to allow Harper to exceed it.

HARPER Pres. Robert Lahti said the delay will not necessarily hurt Harper and added that during the delay college officials once again will go over enrollment projections to make sure nothing has changed since they decided they needed the second site.

In addition, he said Harper officials have surveyed the district for possible sites and "we know where the property is and we know the best and most strategic location."

Lahti said a lengthy delay by the state in deciding whether to authorize a second campus could cause problems because vacant land in the Northwest suburbs is rapidly disappearing.

Harper officials have estimated they will pay between $1.5 and $3 million for a 100-acre second campus. If a second campus is not built, according to the master plan, the college will have to change its plan for its current campus on Roselle and Algonquin roads in Palatine to accommodate increased enrollment.

HARPER now has a total of 10,712 full and part-time students and estimates that it will serve 33,332 full and part-time students by 1995.

If the college buys a second site, it will have to hold a referendum to provide for the funds. The school would then be reimbursed for 75 per cent of the cost of the site once building starts.

Under the college's plan, building on the site would begin in 1976 if the site is acquired this year.

Early Childhood Center has openings

A new group for 3-year-old children is being formed at the Early Childhood Center, operated by the Board of Jewish Education of Metropolitan Chicago at Beth Tikvah Congregation in Hoffman Estates.

The new group will begin Feb. 1. A few places are also available for 4-year-olds.

Classes meet three mornings a week, 9:30 a.m. to 12 noon, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, under the direction of Mrs. Jean Rosenbaum.

The center is designed for children aged three to five and their families to provide new insights in child development, family education, and Jewish experience. General and Jewish content are integrated in the program.

There is a waiting list for enrollment in the September, 1973 program. However, parents who are not interested in the February openings are invited to call and ask for information on future plans and schedules.

The center is licensed by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services. For information call Mrs. Rosenbaum at 251-9298 or Beth Tikvah at 523-4545.

Band to perform in 'Grand Concerts'

The Hersey High School symphonic winds will perform Saturday as featured band at two "Grand Concerts" at the 24th Annual Northwest Band Clinic in Moorhead, Minn.

The concerts will be held at Moorhead State College. Guest conductors of the band will be Arthur Fiedler, director of the Boston Pops Orchestra, and Frederick Fennell, conductor in residence at the University of Miami.

Fiedler has conducted the Hersey band before at its 1971 and '72 pops concerts at Hersey.

Aide spreads the gospel for Bill Scott

With Democrat Daniel Walker sitting in the governor's chair and Illinois' top Republican, William J. Scott, still in office as attorney general, what's in store in the legal department?

Howard D. Kaufman, chief of Scott's Consumer Fraud Protection Division, put it this way: "We had a number of honest, legal disagreements with Gov. Ogilvie. Lord knows what the next four years are going to be like."

The line drew a laugh from the Elk Grove Township Republican Organization, which Kaufman addressed Monday night. But it was not meant strictly as humor.

"We (in the attorney general's office) have to sustain the law, regardless of what political party is involved," said Kaufman. "During the last administration, state agencies often would tell me I was crazy. Now they'll tell me I'm crazy AND politically motivated."

There's "plenty of overlap" between federal agencies and the Illinois Consumer Fraud Division, says Howard Kaufman. See "The Consumer" column by Monica Wilch in Thursday's Suburban Living section.

KAUFMAN, former resident of Des Plaines and Schaumburg and one-time village prosecutor for Elk Grove Village, returned to the scene of his political beginnings to spread the gospel of Scott's innovations in the consumer fraud movement.

Kaufman told the Elk Grove Republicans that their organization was the first to have even that and that Township Commissioner Carl R. Hansen was his first political mentor.

Kaufman reviewed the genesis of the office of attorney general — from adviser to the crown in old-England to legal counsel to governors in American territories, and now as representative, in Illinois, of 255 separate state agencies.

To that role, Kaufman said, Scott has added the function of advocate of the people, mostly in consumer fraud cases.

His first attempt to establish this role — in fighting a rate increase by Commonwealth Edison Co. — succeeded when the court overruled objections of the utility company that the attorney general had no authority to speak for the people.

ARMED WITH THAT and other legal weapons, said Kaufman, Scott since 1969 has expanded the consumer fraud division from two attorneys and three secretaries to a staff of more than 100, including 25 attorneys.

In four years, they have handled 75,000 consumer complaints, said Kaufman — who added that probably only one out of 10 aggrieved consumers ever contact his office.

But, Kaufman declared, Scott has not been concerned only with consumers. "We have balanced business interests with consumer interests," he maintained. The result, he said, has been that reputable businesses, understanding that the attorney general was conducting no vendetta against them, have been willing to sit down and settle consumer claims. In addition, he pointed out, reputable businesses benefit from the uncovering of frauds.

"An honest businessman cannot compete with a crook."

BERNARD LEE, unanimously reelected Monday as president of the Elk Grove Republican Organization, recently was appointed to the board of the Suburban Cook County Tuberculosis Sanitarium District, by George Dunne, president of the county Board of Commissioners.

The district, charged with care for victims of tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases, maintains a 200-bed hospital near Hinsdale and clinics in Park Ridge, Forest Park and Harvy. It also operated traveling x-ray units and cooperative programs with a number of hospitals.

Lee, partner in a Mount Prospect law firm, is vice chairman of the Cook County Housing Authority, a director of the Northwest Suburban YMCA and an Elk Grove Township auditor.

Education Today

by Wanda Lynn Rice

Do you ever wonder what kinds of magazines are designed especially for school board members?

Neither did I, before I got this job. In fact, I was so uncurious about school board magazines that I looked with some dread on the morning mail that brought me the American School Board Journal.

That dread lasted until, lo and behold, I started reading the magazine. It wasn't nearly so dry, stodgy and filled with educational jargon as I thought it would be.

For example, this month's American School Board Journal, the official publication of the National Association of School Boards, has an article attacking educationists (that strange dialect spoken only by educators), an article about school lunch programs and an invitation to the National School Board Convention to be held in April at Disneyland (a fact local boards have gleefully noted).

IN ADDITION, the magazine has an article written by the business manager of the New Orleans public schools containing a "modest proposal" about how to levy a new tax for the support of education — a sex tax.

The taxing idea is simple. The author points out that new taxes have evolved along with economic and social developments. As the automobile developed, for example, governments invented taxes on motor fuel, driver's licenses and other necessary items.

Now that sex is becoming more open, more public and more discussed, the author continues, "it seems natural and sensible that units of local government should tax the new morality."

The tax, he proposes, would be levied, with each man filing a quarterly return claiming a certain number of "transactions," to be taxed at a certain rate. The tax would be levied only on men to "avoid the unfair double taxation of a single transaction."

Enforcement would be equally simple. Each quarter a list of taxpayers would be published listing the amount of tax paid. (Something like the delinquent tax lists the Herald publishes for real estate and personal property taxes.)

The assumption is that any man whose name did not appear on the list would be embarrassed publicly and, in fact, "vanity probably would compel each eligible male to file a return. In fact, the sex tax might go down as the first tax in history about which taxpayers lie in order to pay more than they actually owe."

THE AUTHOR suggests some problems with administering the tax — it would be hard to set up a payroll deduction plan, and the women's liberation movement might object to a tax levied only on men.

I can think of another problem — suppose a fellow accurately lists the number taxable transactions he's had and the number turns out to be higher than the number his wife was able to count? Oh, well, I suppose that would be his problem.

The tax, the author of the article points out, has a lot of advantages. "Unlike the property tax with its limited number of potential payers (the number of property owners in a district) a sex tax offers a constantly expanding base. A more liberal attitude toward sexual activity and an increased use of The Pill would seem to guarantee more taxable transactions with each passing year."

So there it is — a new tax that could spell the end to the continuing financial troubles facing the schools.

And if one of our local boards should propose it in the near future, remember — they got the idea from a magazine published especially for them.

Every once in a while I get the feeling there may be some hope for school districts — especially when they can read about innovative ideas like that one.

Chief given advisory post

Hoffman Estates Police Chief John O'Connell was named vice chairman of the suburban communications advisory board for the Chicago-Cook County Criminal Justice Commission yesterday.

James B. Conlisk, criminal justice commission chairman, appointed O'Connell and named Oak Lawn Police Chief Gerhard A. Hein as commission chairman.

The appointments came after Conlisk welcomed the police chiefs, mayors and city managers to the meeting.

The advisory board will coordinate additional police radio frequencies, the commission's communications study, and federal funds allocated for local communities to acquire engineering expertise and equipment to convert to new frequency assignments.

SINCE THE criminal justice commission adopted the communications study prepared by the Illinois Institute of Technology Research Institute in November, the commission's staff has responded to inquiries from more than 30 communities.

The study would assign local communities to new police radio frequency groupings and reduce the waiting time of many police departments in sending a message.

Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village have begun to implement the plan for frequency assignments. Buffalo Grove, assigned to the same radio frequency as the other three towns, is preparing to join the system.

In addition to setting policies and priorities, the advisory board is needed to encourage voluntary participation in the systems.

CALLING THE advisory board task "of crucial importance" Conlisk said: "Several attempts have been made to put suburban police communications on a more rational footing over a long period of time. The results of these efforts, on the whole, have not been successful."

He said earlier attempts have resulted in FCC action making additional ultra-high frequencies available for police radios. Another result was the preparation of the Institute's plan and the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission earmarking federal funds in 1973 for the implementation of the plan.

Rally, march to protest court's abortion approval

cians and mothers? Do we give them the unrestricted power over life?"

REV. RICHARD Homa, deacon of St. Joseph the Worker in Wheeling said, "I feel I do not know when fetal life becomes a human being and not knowing, I feel I cannot take the chance and do away with fetal life." He added the example of a hunter seeing movement in the bushes and shooting, not knowing whether he was shooting at an animal or a human being.

The Rev. Edward Grace of St. Edna's Roman Catholic Church in Arlington Heights said he "openly disagrees" with the court ruling which he said "ignores the morality of the issue." He added, "I don't know what kind of action you can take against the Supreme Court."

One of the actions urged by the church hierarchy is to participate in Saturday's march, although several local church leaders apparently have not even suggested to their members to participate. Several other priests contacted by the Herald said they have urged their parishioners to join the protest, saying it's better than writing letters.

A crowd numbering several thousand is expected to participate in the rally, according to some estimates, and buses are being provided by The Society for the Preservation of Human Dignity. The buses will leave St. Theresa's Catholic Church in Palatine at noon Saturday.

THE SOCIETY For the Preservation of Human Dignity, which circulated 20,000 leaflets last week calling for church members to attend the rally, issued a statement which read in part:

"Do you believe in murder? Remember, thou shalt not kill. Stand up and be counted. In 11 years in Vietnam, 56,000 Americans died. In one year in New York State (where abortions are legal) 265,000 future Americans died in one year."

The most stirring argument of all came from Msgr. William F. McDonough of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington D.C., who compared the court decision with King Herod's order to slaughter all children under two years old in Bethlehem at the time of Christ's birth.

"The hand that is lifted against the unborn child in abortion is the hand of a murderer," McDonough said, "and the decision of the seven judges of the Supreme Court is much like King Herod, in the days of Christ, who in frenzy seeking out to kill Christ, killed the innocent children under two years of age."

"I say to you seven judges that you have presided over the slaughter of the unborn innocents and that you are in the mold of King Herod."

Law's needed in donation fracas

The Schaumburg fracas about whether money to be donated to a hospital or to a school district points out the need for a rational, state-defined policy to resolve this complex but vital suburban problem.

Schaumburg's dilemma is that a new facet was added to the land donation controversy by Mayor Robert Atcher's village board last week, when it approved a cash donation to the Presbyterian-St. Luke's Hospital, which is considering constructing a hospital in Schaumburg.

Traditionally, land or cash donations have been given, in this case, to Elementary Dist. 54, one of the largest elementary districts in Illinois, to provide for expansion. But the donation to the hospital prompted a flood of protest from Dist. 54 parents.

Atcher defended the decision by restating his past record of providing school sites and developing a tax base for Schaumburg. And there were indications, too, that a move might be made to provide Dist. 54 with at least a token cash contribution for the Dunbar Construction Co. project.

To some, this process which is a fact of life to municipalities and those who wish to develop them is a not-too-subtle form of blackmail. A developer approaches a village government, wanting to build single-family homes or an apartment development. He is told, or the implication is made, that, in order to obtain the proper zoning, it'll be necessary to contribute cash or land to a community taxing body.

If the developer asks what law requires him to contribute, he's told there's no state law to force a contribution. There's also an ordinance in Naperville which defines builder contributions, but it's currently being challenged by a builder's lawsuit.

Village and school officials will argue staunchly — and we agree with them — that builders have a responsibility to communities beyond providing a well-constructed apartment or single-family development. Village officials also argue that a lag between construction and the arrival of tax revenue dictates the need for cash or land donations.

In short, donations are defended as "moral" — but there's little firm ground on which a village or a school district can stand to demand payment.

The donation problem is especially acute in communities such as Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and Buffalo Grove, which are growing like Topsy, thus placing a demand for land and cash to meet park and school needs.

Beyond the needs of single communities, the entire donation system works against regional taxing bodies, such as high school districts and public community colleges. Individual community development, it seems, is not designed to aid such equally important units of government.

What's needed, obviously, is some form of standardization to the whole system of donations, and we believe the state legislature should try once again to draft legislation which would overcome objections raised by the Illinois judicial system.

Under such legislation, the question of the role of institutions such as hospitals could be spelled out. Even though they are private, money-making businesses, they do provide a vital community service.

We understand the concern and anger of Dist. 54 residents who face the spectre of double-shifting and overcrowding unless enough schoolrooms are available for the children of Schaumburg Township. The same problem exists throughout much of the Chicago suburban areas, and to make the best out of the confusion, we need a uniform state law to define how responsible a developer must be for the community he serves.

Black 'stardom'

Since the late Jackie Robinson became the first black major league baseball player back in 1947, black athletes have not just broken the color line in sports but have smashed it to bits.

In sports today, it is said, the only thing that counts is whether you can play the game.

Not necessarily, object two sociologists, Norman Yetman and D. Stanley Eitzen of the University of Kansas.

For the superstars, the Hank Aarons and Wilt Chamberlains and others, the doors are wide open. But for the journeyman black athlete, the one who needs two bounds to leap over tall buildings, it's a different world.

The sociologists studied college and professional basketball and baseball teams to reach their conclusions, which are summarized in Psychology Today magazine.

While on the surface the figures show a sharp rise in black participation, a closer examination reveals a curious fact: Most of the black players in both collegiate and professional basketball are starters; few are second-stringers. They should be randomly distributed throughout an entire team.

In baseball, the situation is even more striking. The mean batting average for blacks has remained 20 points greater than the average for whites for nearly two decades, backing up an earlier claim that not only do blacks have to outperform whites to get into baseball but they must consistently outperform to stay in.

While it is clear that the superior black athlete will win a starting role, say Yetman and Eitzen, the undistinguished one is still likely to lose out to his white counterpart for a spot on the bench.

Rudd blasts unit district plan

There has been much talk lately about the formation of a unit school district including essentially the village of Schaumburg. Since Dist. 54 would be substantially carved up by this process, I think it is important to inform the public of what is likely to happen in the process.

The state law provides that a unit district can be formed by: (1) 200 or more signatures calling for it; 2) a feasibility study approving it; 3) approval of the Superintendent of the Educational Service Region; 4) approval of the State Superintendent; and 5) voter approval only in the area to be unified.

If Schaumburg were to unify as a district, approximately one of every four students in Dist. 54 would be in a different school the first year. Some classes would have over 35 students per classroom and some would be below the present average. These reasons alone, not to cite many others, would cause opposition to the plan.

If Supt. Martwick and Supt. Bakalis both approved unification along political lines in view of the opposition, then the residents of Schaumburg only could vote on it. One would wonder if it would pass in view of the upheaval it would create. How do you persuade a parent to vote for a plan that would require his child to be bused a long distance to a crowded classroom when he can walk to a less crowded classroom under the present system? If you promise him a tax cut, you had better be able to predict the upcoming U.S. Supreme Court decisions 100 per cent accurately or you may end up giving him a tax increase as his reward.

If Schaumburg unifies, what will happen to the rest of the district? Again, the law is clear. The rest of the district can form a unit district as Schaumburg did and then petition to consolidate the two unit districts. This election would take a majority vote of the entire township and not a majority of every village or district. Population numbers would show that this would easily win even without including the dissidents from Schaumburg's unification.

One can easily predict that any unification attempt that would split Dist. 54 will ultimately end in either the present system (due to defeat of the proposal) or a unified township district. The latter alternative was considered by the Board of Education and found to be educationally undesirable.

The next step is up to the politicians.

The public's issue

Trapping draws strong defender

There are two sides to the question of whether it is humane to trap and hunt animals.

In last week's "Public's Issue" column, Mrs. Anita Coffelt of Arlington Heights, editor of a magazine devoted to animal welfare, argued against trapping and hunting.

Her concern was sparked by a Herald article on Mike Schnipper's trapping of muskrats in Palatine township — and today Mike presents a counter argument in our weekly "Public's Issue" column.

by MIKE SCHNIPPER

Trappers are depicted as cruel and heartless people with only the thoughts of death and money in their minds. While some trap for the money involved, for most the thought of monetary advancement is secondary.

Because of man's disregard for the environment, trappers are a necessary commodity in our ecosystem. Pollution, destruction of habitat and the expansion of civilization have depleted the supply of natural predators, and this is the function that the trapper performs. Without the trapper, overpopulation would become a reality in only a matter of time, after that, starvation and disease would begin to exact their toll. Death by either one of these is a needless waste for an animal that could be put to a useful end. The furbearers of our nation are a renewable resource and should be harvested as such. To say that the area I trap would be over-run without me is untrue, but an over-population of any animal ultimately results in damage to both the animal and property, i.e. eroded lake shores, lawns that have been buried through and crops that have been wholly or partially destroyed.

For Mrs. Coffelt to say that animals are left in traps for days is an untruth. Trappers check their trap-lines at least once every 24 to 36 hours and this is often reaffirmed by state laws regulating trapping. To say that if a female is trapped, that her offspring still in the nest or den will starve, is false. Trapping is done during the winter months of the year. How many animals do you know of that bear young in the winter and are still out and about to be trapped? I know of none.

The steel-jawed leg-hold trap in use today has been described as having bone-crushing strength and is inhumane. I personally know that these traps don't have the strength that they are thought to possess. The Department of the Interior has endorsed their use, saying, "This Department is, of course, unalterably opposed to the taking of any wild animals by needlessly cruel or inhumane methods, but because of the absence of any alternative methods for taking wild furbearing animals for management or economic purposes, the steel trap remains the safest and most efficient tool available."

There have been instances where trapping has been seriously restricted, with only destructive results. Tennessee, in 1971, enacted legislation that restricted the placement of traps that made the normal harvest of rabies carriers unproductive and in the following fall, winter and spring, Tennessee suffered the worst epidemic of rabies in the history of the U.S. The legislation was repealed. Virginia once placed the fox on the protected list, only to endure the worst epidemic of rabies in the state's history. Thousands of dollars worth of livestock had to be destroyed and many people and pets were attacked by infected animals. Trappers were called in to trap the animals and prevent further suffering of animals so inflicted. Massachusetts recently restricted the placement of traps to underwater, but the restriction was soon lifted due to the destruction of the salt marshes by muskrats which turned the marshes into mud flats.

If one point in time could ever be singled out as the starting point in which hunters and trappers came to be labeled as heartless murderers, it must be that period in which the American television-watching public and moviegoer fell victim to the Disney syndrome, an outrageous farce perpetrated upon mankind with the express intent of earning millions by the Bambi principle of humanizing animals. Therefore it is difficult for me to understand how one could condone the slaughter of beef steers for the purpose of obtaining steak, hamburger and leather shoes, while at the same time slandering as immoral the trapping of raccoon or beaver for basically the same

Census help is sought

We understand the attractive troop of village women who took our recent census did an excellent job after overcoming many obstacles.

We understand there is to be another census during the coming summer. We believe you could be helpful to the census takers if your paper would carry an article prior to that census explaining the reasons for it and the benefits of a village census, requesting all villagers to welcome and cooperate with the census takers, for it is true that what benefits the village benefits us all.

Cartoon criticized

This is my first "letter to the editor" type of correspondence but feel very strongly about the cartoon featured on page 10, Section 1 of the January 24 issue of your paper.

As I watched news reviews of Johnson and his various types of service to his country it was astounding to notice the rapid aging that took place during his years as president. What a thankless job it is to be leader of this country. Recently I read a very interesting article that recounted the many reasons youth of today are not interested in any part of politics. Rather frightening thought. As studied this cartoon it came to mind that perhaps this type of subtle ridicule might perhaps contribute to the lack of interest and, certainly, the lack of respect many young people today have for government and our leaders.

Of course, no human, regardless of his intent or dedication, could be a perfect president. As Johnson himself said, "the problem is not just to do right but to know what is right." Isn't it time for the news media to slant towards a more positive way of thinking? How nice to recount the struggles of this man towards the betterment of the masses. To call attention to his successes rather than his failures. The cartoon, I feel, was in very poor taste. My letter will change nothing but we each have to try.

by LEE MITGANG
NEW YORK (UPI) — You can spend millions to protect a computer center, but a chink in the armor is almost inevitable.

One civil-minded company, for example, took a troop of Boy Scouts on a tour of its computer installation, forgetting that many Scouts carry magnets capable of playing havoc with taped data. The results of that Sunday outing were huge losses in time and money.

In the course of his consulting work, Joseph J. Wasserman, chairman and president of Computer Audit Systems, Inc., explains how a computer center is threatened on all sides: by fires, floods, theft, embezzlement, disgruntled employees, and scouts with data-hungry magnets.

In some centers, it's the employees, Wasserman says, who prove to be the Achilles' heel for which no defense is readily apparent. "I see cases of women who fall behind their programming schedules and flush invoices down the toilet. I know of a supervisor who, because his section was understaffed, destroyed inputs to avoid getting chewed out for being slow."

WASSERMAN, a former manager of Audit Development for AT&T, founded his computer auditing and security company to help the owners of data information centers tighten their operations.

"In providing our consulting service, we raise questions such as: Who has access to the computer center? What types of devices are there to keep out unauthorized personnel? How high is the quality of guard service?"

Want to increase your spendable income by at least 15 per cent — perhaps as much as 25 per cent?

It's been proved in actual practice that most families can, by using a few money-management tricks. Increase the purchasing power of your "discretionary spending" — that over which you have a degree of control, in contrast to the family's fixed expenses — and in effect you've increased your spendable income. The real measure of how much you have, after all, is how many of the things you need and want you are able to buy.

It will take some effort on your part, for the so-called tricks aren't of the magic want type. They're tricks only in the sense of being clever ideas that most people don't use. The effort they require is in planning your expenditures, and working at making your plan work.

What you spend on clothes, for example, is an important item in the family budget over which you have — or can have — a considerable degree of control. One of the most rewarding tricks is to plan wardrobe needs well ahead, and take advantage of major sale opportunities.

IN MANY stores, prices will be slashed for the February sales, though selections will be limited by this time.

Planning ahead for such off-season sales is an important money statcher, but there's more to it than just watching the calendar and waiting for the sales. ## In Elk Grove Village

New research program for Chemetron

Chemetron Corp.'s Gases and Related Products Group has established a special research and development program aimed at aiding the product and process development of all divisions in the group.

The new research laboratory has been set up at the company's Elk Grove Village facility.

Divisions operating within the group include industrial gases, welding products (arc welding electrodes and equipment, and gas cutting and welding equipment), cardox products (carbon dioxide gases and equipment for welding, carbonation, food freezing and fire protection), railway products (continuous rail welding systems), and the international division.

"By having research on the group level, we can take advantage of the similarity in the markets served by our divisions," said George M. Hohmann, vice president and head of the Gases and Related Products Group. "Research efforts will be concentrated towards the discovery of effective, new scientific knowledge to be shared with all divisions."

THE NEW group research function is being headed by R. J. Keller, named as group director of research.

The group research program will include environmental studies, cryogenic studies, and research in welding products and processes. Plans include further exploration into the oxygen treatment of sewage including the use of molecular sieves as a low cost means of generating oxygen.

Other projects to be studied include oxygen treatment of waters contaminated by chemicals and various wastes; the use of Chemetron's cryogenic gases pertaining to machining, harvesting of food products and food preservation; and a new concept of friction welding that may save costs in rail welding and have broader industrial applications.

PRIOR TO being named group director of research, Keller served as vice president and general manager for Chemetron Welding Products. He joined Chemetron in 1969 as director of engineering for the P & S products line, was named vice president of manufacturing for the Welding Products division the same year and became general manager in 1970.

Keller's career includes 26 years service with A. O. Smith and four years as director of engineering for the Harnischfeger Corp. He earned an AB in chemistry and physics from Hanover College and studied business management at the University of Pennsylvania.

Illinois trade rally set for Friday in Chicago

The International Trade Club of Chicago will spearhead an Illinois Trade Rally Friday at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel.

The theme of the rally, Illinois Jobs in Jeopardy — A Fight for Survival in World Markets, is aimed at alerting Illinois businessmen and the consumer public to the effects of trade restrictive legislation, as proposed in the 93rd Congress by the Burke-Hartke bill.

U. S. Rep. John B. Anderson R-Ill., of Rockford, will address the luncheon session of the rally, discussing Foreign Trade Bills in the New Congress — Appraisal and Outlook. The luncheon will be followed by a workshop seminar on the world trade story — telling it like it is.

Joining forces with the International Trade Club of Chicago in sponsoring the Illinois Trade Rally are the American Importers' Association-Midwest Unit; Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry; Chicago Field Services, U. S. Department of Commerce; Chicago Regional Export Expansion Council; Illinois Agricultural Association; Illinois Department of Agriculture; Illinois Department of Business and Economic Development; Illinois Manufacturers' Association; Illinois Retail Merchants Association; Illinois State Chamber of Commerce; and the League of Women Voters of Illinois.

In announcing the trade rally, International Trade Club president John M. Kuhn said that Illinois' $2.3 billion export business and more than 300,000 trade-related jobs would be in serious trouble if legislation such as the Burke-Hartke bill were passed.

Rally participants will include members and associates of the sponsoring organizations; private citizens from various consumer groups whose support in publicizing the rally will be enlisted; and Illinois political figures.

File early for quick return

The earlier you file your Federal income tax return, the earlier you will receive your refund, Roger C. Beck, district director for the Internal Revenue Service, advised.

By filling out your tax return now, you avoid the last minute rush and are less likely to make careless mistakes.

Before you start, gather together your canceled checks, receipts and other financial papers and be sure to include a copy of last year's return. Then, take a good look at the new tax forms and read the instructions carefully. You will find the revised instructions much easier to follow and understand.

By preparing your return well ahead of the April 15 filing deadline, it will be easier to determine all your tax deductions and figure the lowest possible tax. It will also allow time to double-check any problems that may arise and to review your return to correct any possible errors.

If you need additional information or assistance, contact the Internal Revenue Service Office nearest you.

Ampex Corp. to hold special parley Feb. 20

A special meeting of shareholders of Ampex Corp. will be held at 11 a.m. Pacific time on Feb. 20 at the Ampex offices in Redwood City, Calif.

The purpose of the meeting is to elect directors, ratify Touche Ross & Co. as the company's independent public accountants, and to transact other business. Shareholders of record as of Jan. 2 will be entitled to vote.

Bank fraud topic for Monday meeting

Bank frauds will be discussed Monday at a meeting of the Northern Cook County Federation, Illinois Bankers Association at the Seven Eagles Restaurant in Des Plaines. James Haddad, first assistant in the Illinois state's attorney's office, will speak.

A social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. and dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. The meeting will be hosted by the Des Plaines National Bank, Des Plaines.

The Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 31, the 31st day of 1973 with 334 to follow.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius, American novelist Zane Grey was born Jan. 31, 1872.

On this day in history:

In 1950, President Harry Truman disclosed that he had ordered development of the hydrogen bomb.

In 1950, Explorer 1, the first U.S. earth satellite, was launched from the Cape Canaveral (now Kennedy) missile test center.

In 1961, Ham, a male chimpanzee, was rocketed into space in a test of the Project Mercury capsule later to carry an American astronaut into orbit.

In 1971, with three astronauts aboard, the Apollo 14 spacecraft blasted off for the moon.

A thought for the day: U.S. novelist Christopher Morley said, "Man must learn, or his name is mud, to relish the ebb as well as the flood."

Sat. CLEP seminars set

On a series of Saturday mornings Harper College in Palatine will hold a seminar for persons wishing to prepare for the College Level Examination Program.

The CLEP seminar, from 9 to noon Saturdays, Feb. 3 through May 26, are intended to give assistance in test taking, and review of material covered by the CLEP tests. The seminar is offered by the Continuing Education office.

Practice tests will be administered, tips for taking tests will be given, and reading lists for each academic area will be handed out.

Through CLEP, individuals, some before in college, can take tests based on their experience and prior knowledge and, in passing the exams, receive academic credit toward an undergraduate degree. The seminar is intended for persons seeking refresher work.

Mid-Suburban wrestling

Conant matmen whip Wheeling; Fremd in romp

by KEITH REINHARD Wrestling Editor

Wheeling might have wished its transportation had broken down.

Schaumburg might have wished the season ended a little sooner.

Glenbard North probably wished the MSL season had never started; although for half a dozen conference teams the sailing was smooth and savory last Friday.

Conant, Fremd, Arlington, Palatine, Hersey and Forest View were all big winners as the Mid-Suburban League's dual campaign moved within a week of shutting down last Friday. Although the clashes didn't count in the loop record book, they were easy to take anyway... while the setbacks were equally as difficult to accept for the Wildcats, Saxons, Panthers, Elk Grove, Prospect and Rolling Meadows.

Here's what happened:

CONANT WINS CAT FIGHT
Wildcat basketball coach Ted Ecker has noted a number of times that his teams never perform well in Cougarland. Mat mentor Bob Schulze might have found out what he meant Friday.

Merv Miller's Conant band was anything but hospitable in adding Wheeling to a list of conference victims now totaling eight (out of nine foes including non-conference meets). Even with one of their stellar performers John Beck not making weight, the Cougars won handily, 31-23.

The 'Cats were flying high going in but things didn't quite go as planned. Wheeling crushed at 96 by Keith McCreary, Jay Slezak getting stuck by Mark Lindberg and Mike Kamla getting stunned by Dan Zymkowiak. All are above-average wrestlers.

Even Standout 'Cats Kent Lewis and Steve Jorgenson did not win handily, both squeaking out 4-2 decisions, and Ken Smith almost didn't pin Jim Moody, who was wrestling in his first varsity match.

Bill Kuppert and Bob Zepeda wrapped things up with pins for the hosts, serving Wheeling their third circuit setback in seven tries.

VIKINGS CONQUER SAXONS
All Fremd needed was a leader named Alf Erikson to complete their invasion of Schaumburg Friday. The injury-prone hosts forfeited three weights and unsuccessfully filled in with underclassmen elsewhere while absorbing a 47-6 setback.

Only bright spots for the home crowd were Terry Ruddy, one of those mid-season Saxon replacements who gained his fifth win in eight starts Friday, and Todd Gardner, just returning to the lineup in time to turn back Vike standout Tom Bullen in one feature match.

Another primo faceoff had Steve McGinn of the visitors nosing out Glen Komerska 5-4. Fremd's Dave Motta never had a chance to clash with Rich Kuchnia, however, and Gary Evans was sidelined too, with the flu, allowing the Vikes to wait to their fourth loop win.

GLENBARD GROUNDED... AGAIN
The Panthers will be moving out of the MSL after this season, but GBN coach Bob Fulk may be thinking that it should have happened a year earlier. While his team has had their share of successes outside the loop, they have not been able to recapture a conference dual all winter.

This time it was Arlington's turn to turn them aside, 32-12. Jack Cutlip's hosting Cardinals trailed 9-5 after 119 pounds but only dropped one of the final eight bouts in claiming their fourth circuit victory to go with two setbacks and a tie.

Included in the strong Card finish was a 24-0 romp by Steve Frankovic at 167. It is the biggest winning margin chalked up by an area grappler this season.

One big match didn't come off. Arlington's Tom Patterson didn't slim down enough Friday to go against Lon Yeary. Yeary picked on another good entry, Scott Blitner, instead to remain unbeaten in MSL competition.

WEARY FROM McCREARY. Wheeling's Bob Daulton (bottom) finds the going especially rough at Conant Friday while dropping a 14-1 decision to

Keith McCreary. The Cougars took their cue from this opening victory and went on to pin the Wildcats 31-23 in the conference crossover contest. The triumph for McCreary was his 15th in 19 tries. (Photo by Keith Reinhard)

Mat champ Parker still active in wrestling

by KEITH REINHARD Wrestling Editor

Most old wrestlers, like General MacArthur's old soldiers, probably just fade away.

That might explain the absence of any Satchel Paige or George Blanda types from the highly competitive grappling world. Realistically, it's a young man's sport... here in the United States at least.

Since there is no genuine professional outlet in which to continue, most amateur wrestlers peak out in high school. A few more may continue to blaze their way through a collegiate career. Some even pursue the tournament trail after that.

For the very rare and gifted ones, the Olympics afford a final fling at notoriety. Usually, though, by the time a grappler has hit the ripe old age of 21 or so, he's turned to teaching others or hung up his sweat suit for good.

And then there's Teddy Parker. Ted is 26 years old and still going strong. That in itself is rather unique but perhaps the one distinction more closely relating this Deerfield native to the Pad-dock area wrestling arena is that he was the very first Mid-Suburban league representative in any sport to become an Illinois high school state champ.

It was exactly 10 seasons ago, during the inaugural year of the MSL, that Parker roared through an undefeated campaign, chopping up competition through circuit and tourney play into the regionals, sectionals and eventually past the state finals field to don the 120-pound crown.

For Ted it really wasn't a new experience. He finished third in state as a sophomore and won his first championship as a junior in 1963.

But the 63-64 season was a new one for the league and, in effect, Teddy's prowess on the mats quickly established the MSL among the best in state.

It was an effect consummated just two years ago when another MSL school brought the state team title home with them... and kept it. There are several ironies in this chain of events.

For one, that most recent champion — Hersey — is coached by Tom Porter, who tutored Parker when he was in college.

For another, Ted's '64 title was claimed at the expense of a Herald area grappler. Amazingly, both Parker and his foe, Mike Gluck of Palatine, were defending titlists when they collided in McGaw Hall at Northwestern for the 1964 championship at 120 pounds.

Gluck was trying to repeat at 120. Parker was up from 112 the previous season. And as John Ellis, then Pirate coach and now head mentor at Rolling Meadows, saw it, Parker was probably a little better on his feet.

It had to be one of the all-time great matchups in Illinois prep mat history. And with both competitors staying on their feet most of the way, Teddy reversed out a 3-1 decision on a third period reversal.

That verdict capped a brilliant high school career that saw the young Warrior win over 80 matches in four years of varsity wrestling. Excluding a brief freshman season, his dazzling statistics read like this: 72 won, 1 tied, 2 lost, 17 pins for, none against, 36 takedowns, 248 match points for, 27 against.

The last set of figures is probably the most astounding. Including all the tough competition that three trips into the state finals would entail, through a total of 75 bouts, Ted had only 27 points scored against him... an average allowance from his soph year on of about a third of a point a match.

After establishing virtually every mat record at Deerfield, many of which are still on the books, Parker went on to Indiana State, where Porter was a graduate assistant.

"I remember Teddy back then as being an awfully quiet kid filled with this tremendous desire," Porter recalled. "Even at that time he had set his goal at a national championship and I think he had more determination to reach that goal than any kid I've ever coached."

Porter, who himself finished fifth in the nationals, noted that Parker reached this same plateau twice while in college and perhaps that is what prompted Ted to say afterwards that he really wasn't completely satisfied with his career at Indiana State.

Nonetheless, it was a showing that most grapplers would have envied. He was three times an Indiana Collegiate Conference champ and named outstanding conference wrestler his sophomore and senior years.

Porter substantiated Ted's thoughts about possibly doing better though. "Indiana State was just beginning to take shape as a college wrestling power at the time Teddy was there. The head coach was a tremendous organizer, but he was relatively new at the game and Teddy might not have acquired all the polish he needed."

And that is where it all could have all ended. Parker's older brother Norm, for instance, finished third in state as a prep grappler at Highland Park, went on to Iowa and sandwiched Big Ten titles around an injury his junior year, and then hooked in with Mayor Daley's Youth Foundation after he graduated, teaching inner city youngsters.

But Ted refused to "hang it up." Associating himself with the MDYF as well, he continued to compete. In 1969 he won the Wrestling Federation's 125-pound U.S. title at McGaw Hall and place third in the AAU nationals at 136½.

"The following year I came about as close as ever to retiring from competition," Parker remembers. "I worked on my masters and then moved out to Colorado to teach and went into a sort of limbo as far as wrestling was concerned."

It was a period in which he did much soul searching about his future. In the end, he decided to come back east and make another go at it, still hopeful of fulfilling his potential.

And it turned out to be a rewarding decision. Although he prefers freestyle, he entered and won the National Greco-Roman Tournament sponsored by the Wrestling Federation in Eugene, Ore. He also went on to place third in the Federation's Freestyle U.S. championships at Stillwater, Okla. behind Don Behm and Japanese Olympic champ Yamagida.

"It was by far my best year. I felt better than I ever had and I was setting my sights on the Olympics with confidence," he related.

Just one day before the Olympic Trials, however, Ted lost the full strength of his left arm. It was a pinched nerve in his neck and two long years of hard work and dedication were down the drain.

Time to quit then? Not Teddy. "It's taken a while but through conditioning and treatment I've been able to pretty much regain my old form. I'd still like to take a crack at some international competition, and who knows, perhaps by 1976 I can be ready for the Olympics again."

So Ted lives in Lake Forest now, with his wife Barbara, five-year-old daughter Catherine and six-month-old son Gabe, teaching at Willow Grove School in Buffalo Grove and working and wrestling and aiming some more...

WOULD YOU BELIEVE a final score of 153.94 to 150.51 in Friday night's Hinsdale Central-Hersey gymnastics extravaganza?

"No," chuckled Hersey head coach Don Von Ebers when informed that theoretically his Huskies would taste defeat for the first time this year despite an incredible score of 150.51.

"I just don't think Hinsdale is that good a team," he reflected. "I saw them once and thought they were tremendously overrated. You can't base everything on execution. You have to meet the requirements — the number of moves. When I saw them their tramp fell short and their high bar and parallel bars were short on the second and third men.

"They execute well," Von Ebers continued, "but they just don't have the difficult routines — the tough tricks. They rely more on execution of the required tricks. That's where they are quite good and steady."

The only way that incomprehensible final score could become reality would be if every varsity gymnast duplicated his best effort of the season . . . or bettered it.

Hinsdale rocketed to a 150.65 against Wheaton Central Friday night but managed "just" 144 against Evanston the very next evening.

"We're attempting to make the scoring as consistent as possible," Von Ebers said. "We've got four judges lined up for this one which means the top and bottom scores will be kicked out and the middle two averaged."

"I'm even thinking in terms of a superior judge — one who would rule in cases where the two middle scores are within the requirements of say an invitational or state meet."

"I want to beat them fair and square or lose fair and square," he leveled. "I don't want to win or lose to the judges. I think I have four who haven't seen Hinsdale this year. Some judges just go crazy when they see Hinsdale's red shirts."

The Red Devils' head coach Tony Canino expressed his perennial confidence when asked about the showdown and often mentioned Hinsdale's past records. They speak for themselves.

"We've won 48 straight on the varsity," Canino said. "We certainly have tradition here (the Red Devils are three-time defending state champions) and we expect to have a good crowd on hand. I know we had 3,500 in our gym when Arlington showed up last year."

"But I think that where Hersey is a relatively fresh school and they are just beginning to realize their success, we're bucking complacency in a way. After all, we've won 27 state championships in 15 years here and it's almost become expected rather than enjoyed."

"I still only consider this as a dual meet," Canino said. "We'll lay our stakes on the table at the state meet. This will be a great meet for both teams and it will boil down to the team that hits."

A mini-state meet in comparison to the post-season affair, many of the individuals competing Friday are bound to resume their head-to-head combat come March 16-17.

Here is the way each coach viewed his strengths and weaknesses:

Canino — I think we're better in free ex and side horse, but they could take high bar and trampolines. I'd rate our parallel bars even and we should have an edge on rings. I think our rings will be the difference in the meet. I won't be surprised if it goes down to the last event.

Von Ebers — "I think the meet will go down to the all-around averages. I feel like we can match them in free ex, beat them on tramp and rings and think the horizontal bar and parallel bars will be fairly close. It will depend on how the kids hit. I have to give them side horse, but I'll be watching closely to see how our kids hit with them. We should be within a point and one-half of them."

The possible lineups of each team appear below opposite the high average by each gymnast in a dual meet this year. Some of the scores are awesome.

Says Canino of his touted side horse crew: "We may be the strongest in the country. Roger was ninth in state last year and Walters is right in stride." The duo still fall short of Hinsdale's super horseman Ted Marcy who graduated last June after ruling Illinois with an incredible 9.75 average.

Looking back to the 1972 state meet, Hersey can boast Steve Schwabe's eighth-place finish in floor exercise and the combo of Jack McLaughlin and John Braddock who claimed 13th and 19th, respectively, on trampoline.

Devil Dave Dodge parked right behind Braddock in the state meet in 20th while Hinsdale ringman Doug Wood is returning off a third-place effort.

"He's the best ringman Hinsdale's ever had," Canino revealed. "He's averaged 8.75 for 10 meets so far and he's probably the top contender for the rings title this year."

The Huskies counter with preliminary qualifier Tom Doczi who appears to be another shoo-in for the finals at Prospect in March.

"If we have a weak event, it would have to be horizontal bar," Canino confessed. The Red Devils are still searching for their first score of 8.0 or better and will be in trouble if they don't find one or two Friday night.

Parallel bars may be the pivotal event in the program. Neither squad has a clear-cut path to the winner's circle. Canino calls both teams "solid," but very much up in the air.

The Huskies will miss Mike Murphy (7.7 tops but broken arm) and Von Ebers has left the third and fourth slots open to either Kevin Roby, Roger Kuhns or Bob Sommerfeld.

Should the meet outcome hinge on the all-around averages of five-event performers Pat Corrigan of Hinsdale and Joe Shepherd of Hersey, there may be some quick heartbeats while the officials derive the averages.

Corrigan's best has been a 7.44 and Shepherd's a 7.36. That's only eight one-hundredths of one point deviation and one heck of a way to win or lose a meet of this consequence.

"Don't forget we've already beaten them twice this year in invitational," Von Ebers was quick to add. "But this is the first time our two schools have ever met under dual-meet circumstances."

What a way to make an acquaintance!

Rolling Meadows pads advantage in Metropolitan hockey division

by LARRY EVERHART

A first-place margin that was a shaky one point only last week suddenly became a much more commanding three points for Rolling Meadows Sunday in the Metropolitan High School Hockey League. Northwest Division action as always was at the Arlington Ice Spectrum in Palatine.

With just four more league games remaining for each team and with the co-headers of second place, Palatine and St. Viator, up and down and only a game over .500. Rolling Meadows now looks like a solid bet to capture the Northwest title going into playoff action beginning in March.

Meadows upped its record to 6-2-2 and its lead to a game and a half over the Pirates and Lions (both 5-4-1) with an easy 7-1 victory over winless Hersey. Meanwhile, St. Viator was dropping a last-minute 2-1 upset loss to Driscoll of Addison and Palatine was climbing into a second-place tie by scrambling for a 3-3 deadlock against Arlington, still in fifth place with two wins and two ties in 10 games.

Rolling Meadows stayed hot, having not lost in its last four games (with one tie against undefeated New Trier East). Palatine, which won its first five league games and appeared set to run away with the title, is now winless in its last five.

Sunday's games were the first intra-division clashes since Dec. 10 after four cross-division games for each team. Northwest teams probably were glad to return to their own neighbors for opponents since they collectively did not fare well against the stronger North loop.

Rolling Meadows had no problems with Hersey, which did not avert a shutout until late in the game when it was 7-0. Mike Retzer led the charge with a hat trick, getting the first three goals of the game. Other Mustangs putting the puck in the net were Dave Retzer, Dick Glass, Marc Klomp and Craig Glander. Bill Conway had two assists and others were spread out among John Verdico, Marc Klomp, Scott Glander, Craig Glander and Glass.

Don Zasady recorded Hersey's only goal, assisted by Kurt Leszkiewicz and Claude Drassard.

Meadows coach Jim Burgin had praise for goalie Jack Conway as well as Retzer and Klomp. "Hersey could have scored more if Conway had not been so good in the net," he said. "We weren't up for it. Hersey played well, and the game was closer than the score indicated."

"We may have been looking ahead toward our next two games."

The reason would be that those two are against the closest pursuers, Palatine and St. Viator. "We've got to go out and win every one," said Burgin. "If Palatine or Viator beats us they'll be right there."

Palatine had to fight back from a 3-0 deficit after two periods for a 3-3 tie with Arlington. The tying goal by Paul Vrtis came with just 2:41 left.

Bill McGuire put Arlington on the board in the first period, unassisted, and Cardinal goals in the second session were by Rob Hudec (assisted by Brent Klemm) and Klemm (assisted by Mark Santell and Hudec).

Mike Sorci broke the ice for Palatine early in the third period unassisted and Mark Dietrich narrowed it to 3-2 with Bill Carney and Vrtis assisting. Carney also assisted on Vrtis' game-tyer.

Ed Dietrich, filling in for Palatine coach Ed Price who is out of town, said that in the third period his team "began to play fundamental hockey, checking and being more aggressive. We had to get charged up. Before that we were letting the other team carry the puck too much. Maybe we're back on the track now."

St. Viator's heartbreaking loss to Driscoll was an all-too-familiar reminder of the first match between those teams in December when Driscoll scored with seven seconds left for a 1-1 tie. This time Mike Waghome came up with the game-winner with 52 seconds left for Driscoll's third league win.

St. Viator had scored first on Steve Lear's goal in the first period, assisted by Mike Brawley and Bob Wagner. Ed Stykist tied it for Driscoll in the middle period.

The deciding goal came on a scramble in front of the net with Driscoll exerting great pressure.

The Palatine-Rolling Meadows game, which highlights this Sunday's schedule at the Spectrum, will be broadcast on WMM-FM radio, 92.7, at 7:30 p.m. with Dick Thomas calling the shots. Other Northwest Division games will be St. Viator vs. Arlington at 6:00 and Driscoll vs. Hersey at 8:00. Three North Division contests will be staged in the afternoon.

Six games are played every Sunday at the Spectrum, behind Arlington Park Dodge on Northwest Highway. Teams are self-supporting clubs of high school students but not programs of the high schools themselves.

Chambers top Bears' pick in pro draft

Wally Chambers of Eastern Kentucky, who starred in post-season play after receiving little national attention in college, yesterday was the Chicago Bears' first pick in the National Football League's annual player draft.

The Bears selected eighth on the first round.

Chambers is a 6-foot-5, 240-pound defensive end who was a standout in the Senior Bowl and is considered a ferocious pass-rusher. He has exceptional speed for a lineman.

The Bears also picked up two veterans in the drafting process Tuesday, trading their No. 17 selection to Detroit for tight end Craig Cotton (6-4, 222), and a No. 19 selection, received in a trade, to New England for running back Carl Garrett (6-0, 215), a 25-year-old who is in his fifth year of pro football and was American Football League Rookie of the Year.

The Bears' drafted quarterback Gary Huff of Florida State (6-1, 190) on the second round. His size bothered some scouts but he has a strong arm.

Linemen headed the list of early selections with former Maine South High School (Park Ridge) star Dave Butz tabbed by St. Louis on the fifth round.

FIRST ROUND SELECTIONS

1. John Matuzak (Tampa, tackle) to Houston.
2. Bert Jones (LSU, quarterback) to Baltimore.
3. Jerry Starnore (Texas, tackle) to Philadelphia.
4. John Hannah (Alabama, tackle) to New England.
5. Dave Butz (Purdue, tackle) to St. Louis.
6. Charles Young (USC, tight end) to Philadelphia.
7. Paul Seymour (Michigan, tackle) to Buffalo.
8. Wally Chambers (E. Kentucky, defensive end) to Chicago.
9. Ollie Armstrong (Purdue, back) to Denver.
10. Joe Ebermann (Syracuse, tackle) to Baltimore.
11. Sam Cunningham (USC, back) to New England.
12. Chuck Foreman (Miami, running back and receiver) to Minnesota.
13. Burgess Owens (Miami, cornerback) to New York Jets.
14. George Armstrong (Iowa State, back) to Houston.
15. Isaac Curtis (San Diego State, wide receiver) to Cincinnati.
16. Steve Holden (Ark. State, wide receiver) to Cleveland.
17. Ernie Price (Texas A & I, defensive end) to Detroit.
18. Mike Holmes (Texas Southern, cornerback) to San Francisco.
19. Barry Stingley (Purdue, wide receiver) to New England.
20. Billy Joe Dupree (Michigan State, tight end) to Dallas.
21. Barry Smith (Florida State, wide receiver) to Green Bay.
22. Pete Adams (USC, tackle) to Cleveland.
23. Ray Guy (Southern Mississippi, kicker) to Oakland.
24. James Thomas (Florida State, cornerback) to Pittsburgh.
25. Johnny Rodgers (Nebraska, wide receiver and running back) to San Diego.
26. Joe DeLoach (Michigan State, guard) to Buffalo.

Forest View, Schaumburg bowlers capture districts

Another sport has been added to the several in which Herald area schools annually travel downstate. But for the first time, it's girls doing the traveling . . . and not just to cheer.

Forest View and Schaumburg both won district meets last weekend to qualify for the 32-team field in the first annual Illinois girls state bowling finals this weekend in Peoria, sanctioned by the Illinois High School Association.

Forest View hosted one of the district meets at Rolling Meadows Bowl and eliminated Arlington and Prospect, while Schaumburg also was a winning host at Streamwood Lanes, ousting Fremd, Conant and Rolling Meadows.

Forest View had the highest team total of all of these teams from the Mid-Suburban Conference for girls, which includes several other sports. The "Falconettes" defeated Arlington 1464-1304 in the final round, getting the only score better than 1400 among the seven area teams.

Arlington had edged Prospect 1280-1244 in the first round while Forest View had a bye in the three-team tourney.

Best individual scorers in the tourney, both from Forest View, were Terri Ullrich with games of 151 and 161. (Each girl bowled two games). Teammate Patty Russo had the best game with 178. Other members of the winning team were Gayle Dratt, Andy Dziem and Jodi Schroeder.

Schaumburg's top girl was Mary Barnett with 143 and 140, while Prospect was led by Jan Roche with 149 and 129.

Schaumburg won its final match 1336-1285 over Fremd. The Saxons had advanced with a 1356-1293 victory over Conant and Fremd had eliminated Rolling Meadows 1342-1271.

L-Tran rolls 2865 to top Paddock women's scoring

by GENE KIRKHAM

Elk Grove Lanes hosted the Paddock Women's Classic Traveling League and some fine scoring action Saturday night. L-Tran Engineering provided some highlights in a seven point sweep over Morton Pontiac.

L-Tran fired team games of 914, 950, and 1001 for the league leading 2865 series. Lorrie Koch led her L-Tran team with 601 with games of 178, 210, and 213. Toshi Inahara fired 177, 208, and 211 for 596. Marlis Pleckhardt rolled a 569 series with a 203 game. Isobel Kosi fired 574, and Vi Douglas rolled 525.

Ruth Baurhyle of Morton Pontiac led the league with 178, 181, and a brilliant 257 game for a 616 series as her Morton team lost with games of 645, 931, and 948 for a 2724 team series. Jan Broderick had 217 and 548, Betty Parkhurst, 205 and 542, Lou Lass completed the scoring for Morton with 526.

Striking Lanes swept seven points from Franklin-Weber Pontiac. Striking rolled games of 863, 977, and 867 for a 2727 series while Franklin-Weber Pontiac had 852, 685, and 832 for a 2569 series. Eunice Whitmore of Striking led her team with a 216 game and a 574 series. Lu Schoenberger had 560, Judy Croston a 225 game and a 533 series, and Lois Goettsche rolled a 545.

Again the high score of the match was rolled by a bowler on the losing team as Marge Lindenberg fired a fine 607 series for Franklin-Weber with games of 180, 245, and 812. Betty Peterman of Franklin-Weber had a 202 game and a 532 series.

The co-sponsored Doyle's Sports Shop-Des Plaines Lanes team remained in first place by two points by defeating Hoffman Lanes five points to two. Doyle's-Des Plaines rolled games of 851, 916, and 964 for a 2731 series as they won the last two games and the series point. Hoffman had games of 892, 856, and 856 for a 2604 series as they won the first game.

Winnie Lohse of Doyle's-Des Plaines led her team with 587 with a 246 final game. Bonnie Kuhn had 202 and 562, Dee Harris rolled a 212 game and a 551 series, Ann Neumann a 205 game and a 521 series, and Nancy Porcellus had a 510 series. For Hoffman Lois Kamenske rolled a 215 game and a 551 series, Joan Christensen had a 214 game and a 532 series, Peggy Harris fired a 530 series, and Bonnie Bartlett had a 516 series.

Arlington Park Towers fired team games of 862, 909, and 860 to defeat Thunderbird Country Club's 887, 866, and 843 totals five points to two. Arlington won the series point 2631 to Thunderbird's 2596.

Dona Jean Sander led the scoring in this match with a 563 series, Pam Cwik had a 540, Mary Lou Kolb rolled 535, and Peggy Wales rolled a 206 game and a 515 series. Thunderbird was led by Dee Kachelmuss, who rolled a 541 series. Mary Yurs had a 526, Arlene Stohrer fired a 218 game and a 528 series, and Joan Hunsberger rolled a 515 series.

The league travels to Des Plaines Lanes this Saturday, Feb. 3, with the following match games scheduled: Hoffman Lanes vs. Morton Pontiac; Striking Lanes vs. Thunderbird Country Club; Franklin-Weber Pontiac vs. Arlington Park Towers; and L-Tran Engineering vs. Doyle's-Des Plaines Lanes.

Harper's dual mark hits 21-1 after 2 easy wins

The Skyway Conference dual meet title tucked safely away, Harper went through a final tuneup prior to its league tourney by disposing of Blackhawk and Richland Center at Moline Saturday.

In romping past Richland 41-8 and trimming the host Braves, 30-12, Ron Bessemer's charges finished up the dual meet portion of their 72-73 campaign in possession of a nifty 21-1 slate. Harper was scheduled to go against Triton as well Saturday but the Warriors cancelled out.

The Hawks actually dropped only two matches all day. They forfeited at 150 to both teams and Pichland's only other points came through a tie at 142 with Harper's Gary Thacker. Against Blackhawk Tom Dal Campo dropped a 2-1 decision at 134 and heavyweight Phil Roder was stopped 7-3.

Bernie Kiehlman, meanwhile, took a pair of decisions at 118 and Al Gordon disposed of two foes at 126, devastating his Brave opponent, 20-2.

Tryst Anderson at 190 was the only other Hawk who had to work for both victories. Kurt Ehling at 150 picked up one forfeit win after posting a quick 59-second pin against Richland while John Majors and Ron Ortwerth notched a decision and a forfeit win apiece.

The double triumph by Anderson allowed him to remain undefeated going into next weekend's big conference showdown and he will be among the favorites to win individual loop titles when the Skyway tourney convenes at Lake County Feb. 10.

Harper will go into that gathering favored to win team laurels after knocking off Triton, Joliet and Muskegon in one swoop last Wednesday afternoon. Triton had been their closest competitor for the dual meet crown until they fell to the Hawks 20-11.

"Those wins on Wednesday were more significant than any others this season. Joliet was undefeated going in and one of the top-ranked outfits around and Muskegon's always respected," Bessemer noted, adding, "The victory over Triton, of course, puts us a leg up on them going into the conference meet."

Along with Anderson, Bessemer has high hopes for Ortwerth and Majors among others next week. "Ron's been kind of overlooked all season but his only loss has been to a national champ and he was on the sick side and wrestling up a weight at the time to boot."

"Majors dropped a couple last week but one was to Art Mohorn of Triton who placed third in the nationals at 190 last year and the other was to Dan Brink, Muskegon's Michigan Collegiate Tourney champ."

"One point decided both of John's losses too," added Bessemer. "He has nothing to be embarrassed about."

Falcons take 2 on mats

The area's undefeated ranks were trimmed by two Saturday despite a generally successful showing by Mid-Suburban League wrestling teams against outside competition.

Just about everybody in the loop followed up their Friday conference get-togethers with exhibition contests the following afternoon. And half a dozen clubs were successful to some degree at least.

Forest View annexed a pair of conquests at Rockford while Conant, Elk Grove, Arlington and Hersey won single success and Palatine split against a couple of good teams. Only Fremd, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg failed to make the win column, with the Saxons faltering twice after inviting in a few of the tougher clubs in the region.

CONANT 38, LAKE PARK 15

The Cougars remained hot in registering win No. 8 out of their last nine tries at the expense of the hosting Lancers.

Lake Park won only four bouts and were never really in contention after forfeiting 103 and losing at 98 on Keith McCreary's 12-0 rout.

Later John Beck, Dan Szymkowiak and Bill Koppert all planned for the guests, Koppert recording his 10th fall of the season, and Dave Thomas and Bob Zepeda added shutout victories.

Dwaine Gordon was Conant's other winner as the Lancers saw their record against MSL competition dip to 1-6 for the season.

FOREST VIEW 25 ROCKFORD GUILDORD 21 FOREST VIEW 21 ROCKFORD EAST 18

The Falcons harvested a pair of victories from a trip out west, upping their non-conference 1-4 to 10-2, but the price included a setback for their touted 155-pounder Steve Dolphin.

Dolphin carried a 17-0-2 ledger out with him but was stunned 4-3 by Gullford's Dalziel, who earlier this year had tied John Tuttle of Palatine and lost to Steve Frankovic of Arlington.

Dolphin's setback also made things uncomfortable for Forest View at the time, dropping them behind the Vikings 18-17. Rick Urban countered with a 4-0 decision, however, and Chuck Meade wrapped things up early with a third-round pin at 185.

The meet with East also went down near the wire. Falcon John Gross lost his 95-pound opener to Tim Anderson by the very same 5-2 score Anderson had dished out in the Prospect Tourney and later it was 12-9 and then 15-12 in favor of Rockford when Dolphin came up to bat.

Dolphin won to tie it, then Urban lost and Meade won to tie it again at 16-18 going into the final skirmish on the card. Mike Petran stopped up and pinned his foe at 2:56 after that and Forest View came home with a pair of victories.

ARLINGTON 51 NILES NORTH 8

The visiting Vikings forfeited eight weights so there really wasn't much of a contest. It was an opportunity for Niles to showcase their fine 138 pounder Bruce Zimmer however and the Glenbrook South Holiday Tourney winner wasn't disappointing in roaring to a 15-0 verdict.

Jeff Whitnell and Dave Weber earned decisions for the hosts and coupled with all those six-point plays, the Cards were easily able to even up their non-loop record at 3-3.

ELK GROVE 37 ELMWOOD PARK 18

The hosting Tigers found no one suitable to pit against Elk Grove's two big guns, Craig Mann and Rick Morris, and forfeited both weights. They also drew a blank at 145 and coupled with regular setbacks at three weights they proved to be no match for the rebounding Grenadiers.

Jim Heffern and Mike Warren garnered decisions for the Grove and Tom Balmes and Dan Mincey felled their opponents. For rookie Balmes the pin was especially nice since it was also his first victory of the season.

The verdict evened out the Grens at 3-3 against non-conference competition.

HERSEY 37 LA GRANGE 9

Joe Rizza earned himself a niche in the 72-73 record log and launched hosting Hersey is the right direction Saturday when he ripped up the mats 26-2 in a 98-pound outing.

The Lions did not equal that point production until they added up the scores of their first nine wrestlers in becoming the 18th Huskie victim of the season Saturday.

LaGrange only won three bouts, and produced just 32 match points all afternoon. Meanwhile Kurt Weisenborn, Bob Noll and Kevin Pancratz netted pins and Otto Meisenheimer, Mike Pusateri, Keith Hahn, Pat Hart and Jeff Reinhard won decisions to bolster the Hersey cause.

PALATINE 29 LIBERTYVILLE 17 WEST CHICAGO 28

Since Pirate mentor Bob Sonneman resides in Libertyville, it was with added pleasure that his club dealt the Wildcats only their second setback of the campaign Saturday.

On the other hand West Chicago, headed up by All American griddler and fourth-finishing state wrestling contender Scott Dierking proved a little too much for the hosts and they wound up dropping their third non-loop affair in ten attempts.

Only Bob Wahl, Rich Harold, Randy McAllister and John Loneragan were not beaten at all during the day and Loneragan settled for a 1-1 tie against West Chicago.

Wahl was probably the most impressive local performer in outscoring two foes by a 25-4 margin.

John Tuttle also won in the West Chicago meet. Against Libertyville the Palatine effort was hiked by Jim Haneith, Lon Marchel and Bruce DeWye triumphs along with Al Koenig's state-mate.

FENTON 28, FREMID 15

The Bisons gave warning to other area teams when they derailed the Viking express Saturday with a comfortable 14-point victory.

Fenton has been entered in the district tourney at Rolling Meadows several weeks away. They have proven to Fremd now at least that they have a number of capable performers.

Two Vikes who know best are heavyweight Tom Hoey, who absorbed only his third loss in 18 matches and Mark Lynch at 126 who saw his log lowered to 10-5-1.

Only winners among the guests were Mike Oster, Dave Motta, John Lunch, Steve McGuigan and Tom Bullen. And Fenton never trailed once even in yielding to these five grapplers.

MAINE NORTH 25 ROLLING MEADOWS 21

Maine North's lack of success in athletic endeavors this year will never be believed by the Mustangs after they had their non-conference log lowered to the .500 mark by the Norseman Saturday.

Maine even forfeited a couple of weights and still had enough going for them so that a heavyweight triumph by Chuck Peters of Meadows didn't quite close the gap at the finish line.

Also winning for the hosts were Roy Carlstrom, Bruce Carlson, and Kevin Harrington along with forfeit collectors Gary Ahr and Tom Neuzil.

The Norsemen equalized the forfeits with a couple of pins and the margin of difference in the match turned out to be the extra point Jack Horowitz earned after an 18-1 explosion.

ADDITION TRAIL 58 SCHAUMBURG 0 MAINE EAST 61 SCHAUMBURG 0

With Brian Wicklund, Andy Jones, Glen Komerska, Guy Bedow, Rich Kuchnia, and Gary Evans all out of the lineup and Todd Gardner just back off the injury list it was no time to go against such teams as the Blazers and the Demons.

But the Saxons had them on the schedule and had to accept the 100-point bombardment that was the natural result.

Gardner, who had won a day earlier in his first appearance back out, was too tired to last very long Saturday, and Evans, in bed with the flu all week, came back just long enough to receive his first loss of the season.

Even coach Rick Gerz was strapped into a neck brace for the torturous affair. It was a day Schaumburg would just as soon forget ever happened.

Lion wrestlers post split

Collectively it was a .500 performance. Individually there were some highs and lows too as St. Viator wound up with a split to show for a pair of double dual outings over the weekend including a couple of conference encounters.

Friday John Zid's crew outdistanced St. Patrick 38-17 but was in turn dumped by Holy Cross 30-19 in Suburban Catholic League action on the Crusader mats.

Saturday the Lions nosed out Ridgewood 25-24 but were crushed by West Leyden 38-6 in a meet hosted by the Rebels.

Only Tim Marwitz came away from the action with four wins to his credit. His victories included a 6-4 verdict over Ridgewood's Tony DiGulda, who was unbeaten all season going in to their fray.

Tim's big brother John at 126 nearly fared as well, winning three times and tying once. He also turned back a previously unbeaten grappler when he outpointed John Morocco of Holy Cross 8-6.

The heavier Marwitz also looked impressive in knotting with Leyden's Tom Perry, 2-2. Perry has also not lost yet this season.

Dave Nozicka and Mike Mooney chalked up three wins apiece on behalf of Viator. Nozicka lost a tough 6-5 decision to Fitzgibbons of the Knights and Mooney was halted 15-6 by Leyden's Forsythe after battling him even through the first two rounds.

Heavyweight Ralph Bosch lost to West Leyden as well and he nearly had two setbacks Saturday after going down to the final moments trailing his Ridgewood foe 2-1.

The Ridgewood verdict was more significant since Viator was only trailing 24-22 at the time and any kind of win by Bosch would have changed things around. So Bosch changed things around with his foe, scoring a reversal in the last ten seconds to win 3-2, and his team triumphed, 25-24.

Holy Cross took only seven of 12 matches against the Lions but they were able to widen the gap by recording three pins during the meet.

Against Pat's the winning effort was aided by Bernie Thomas, Mark Malouf, Sean Reilly and John Breen. Lions posting victories over the Rebels included Steve Schwellenback, by a decisive 7-1 count on his first day of varsity wrestling.

St. Viator is now 5-2-1 against conference competition. They will be idle until the SCC tourney gets under way Feb. 10.

Just Dogs

by Dave Terrill

Top Ten —
Registration figures for 1972 just released by the American Kennel Club show the total number of dogs registered as 1,101,943 compared to 1,129,200 in 1971, a 2.4 per cent decrease.

Although Poodles are still the number one dog for 1972, and retain their coveted position as the most popularly registered breed of dog, they have dropped off in number with 218,899 in 1972 compared to 250,491 registered in 1971, a 14.6 per cent decrease.

In second place are German Shepherds; third, Beagles, fourth, Dachshunds; fifth, Irish Setters; sixth, Miniature Schnauzers; St. Bernards are seventh; Labrador Retrievers, eighth; Collies, ninth, and Doberman Pinschers tenth.

Changes did occur in the above nine placings, with perhaps the Irish Setter and Doberman Pinscher as the most outstanding. The Irish Setter jumped from seventh place in 1971, to fifth place in 1972. Registrations in this breed increased by more than 10,000 for the second year in a row, the largest gains made by any breed in each of these years.

The Doberman Pinschers moved up to the No. 10 spot from 13th in 1971, replacing the Pekingese, which dropped to 12th place. It is interesting to note that for the first time in modern AKC history, there were no toy breed placings in the top 10.

With respect to registrations by group, only sporting and working groups showed an increase over 1971 figures, with a significant 12.1 per cent increase recorded in the sporting group breeds.

Water needed —
Water is one of the most common substances found on earth. It also is one of the most important parts of a dog's diet, and it is most important that he has a fresh supply available.

About 70 per cent of a dog's body is water. It is present in every tissue of his body. Even his bones are 25 per cent water, so it's important that a dog be able to keep the water content of his body fairly stable.

A dog who eats canned dog food might not drink too much water from his bowl, because most canned dog foods contain about 75 per cent moisture. The same dog would drink more water if he was fed a soft-moist food, as they contain about 30 per cent moisture. If the dog was fed dry food, which is about 10 per cent moisture; it's obvious that he will drink much more water.

In all three cases, however, he will maintain the correct level of moisture in his body to carry on his normal body functions and remain healthy.

He can't turn a faucet on such as you and I, so remember, keep a fresh supply in his water pan or bucket. He can't drink too much water, but he can drink too little.

Barks and Bays —
A repeat for this time of year. Remember to keep the windows open a crack if you leave the dog in the car while you run in to buy something in the store, especially if the motor is left to idle.

Owners forget that carbon monoxide from a faulty exhaust system can leak into a car much easier when it is standing still. Most places it is against the law to let a car run at idle and unattended.

East's mat streak reaches 26; Check tops Cortez in headliner

by MIKE KLEIN

An exhibition victory by Maine East's Jay Check over Addison Trail's Ralph Cortez highlighted weekend wrestling action in which Maine East won three more dual meets.

Check never was scheduled to battle Cortez when East, Addison Trail and Barrington gathered at Schaumburg for a series of double duals.

But neither Barrington nor Schaumburg had a 98-pounder. So East's George Jurinek and Addison Trail's Tony Parks arranged a match between their wrestlers.

Check and Cortez are no strangers to each other. They'd met in the Russ Erb Memorial Tournament finals during Christmas at Glenbrook South.

Cortez won that match, taking a 6-2 decision. But last Saturday, Check turned the tables, pinning Cortez at 3:55 of the second period.

Forefeit wins against Barrington and Schaumburg plus a 4-2 Friday night decision over Glenbrook North's Jim Switzer moved Check's record to 19-2-1 this season.

He trails only Blue Demon teammate Marc Grant, a three-time weekend winner who's now 21-0. Grant pinned Barrington's Bob Cash (2:58) and Schaumburg's Bob Kinahan (1:59). Grant decided Glenbrook North's Brad Gangware 15-3.

By defeating Glenbrook 31-9, Barrington 51-9 and Schaumburg 64-0, the Blue Demons stretched their unbeaten streak to 26 consecutive meets, 14 this year.

In other area action, Maine West used six sophomores on varsity and still scored a 21-15 victory over Niles West last Friday.

Maine North was a 47-3 loser to Central Suburban League foe Glenbrook South but decided Rolling Meadows of the Mid-Suburban League 25-24 on Saturday.

Other impressive individual streaks were kept intact during the weekend. North 105-pounder Jack Horowitz won twice and is now 16-1.

Against Glenbrook South, Horowitz decided Titan Rob Schnell 7-0. Schnell had just dropped from 112 pounds where he had a 12-match winning streak.

Then Saturday, Horowitz had all sorts of fun with Rolling Meadows, winning 20-1.

Maine West's Fred Gano moved to a 15-1 record at 112 pounds by decisioning Niles West's Mike Schnurr 7-0.

And sophomore teammate Brian Real recorded his ninth pin, a school record, when he struck Niles West's Rich Dominick 47 seconds after the opening whistle. Real is 12-2-1.

Three other Maine East wrestlers have sustained only two losses this season. Paul Board and Jim Sylverne have each compiled 18-2-1 records. Mike Kan is 9-2.

Board won two decisions and picked up a forfeit while Sylverne registered two pins and a tie during the weekend.

Wrestling at 112 pounds, Board decided Glenbrook North's Carl Schultz 7-1 on Friday evening. Saturday, he was a 6-2 winner over Schaumburg's Terry Ruddy and won by forfeit against Barrington.

Sylverne (119) pinned Schaumburg's Bill Schiller (3:09) and Barrington's Russ Visser (4:22). He tied Glenbrook North's Jack Cotto 1-1.

Kan decided GBN's Terry Flannery 6-1 and Schaumburg's Tod Gardner 5-0. But in a big test against Barrington's Tom Cooke, Kan was pinned at 5:09.

East heavyweight Mike Johnson plus Tony Raschillo (132) and Scott Vaughan (155) also recorded three weekend wins.

Johnson pinned Glenbrook's Chuck Haley (1:06) and Barrington's Bill Kuhn (2:15). He also received a forfeit and is now 13-5-1.

Raschillo, now 16-4, pinned Schaumburg's Dan Yerman (5:37). He was a decision winner over Glenbrook's Lance Rogers (3-2) and Barrington's Dick Vanderbergh (21-3).

Vaughan decided Glenbrook North's Nick Liahos (3-0) and Barrington's Jim Wallace (19-3). He stuck Schaumburg's Dan Young at 3:37 and is now 18-4.

East's John Funovits also won twice and tied once, moving his record to 9-3-2. Don Isacson, now 10-10-1, won twice and lost once.

Substitute 128-pounder Herman Edelson registered one win, one loss and one tie.

Bob Boffman and Ken Ujljye split 105-pound duties. Boffman decided Glenbrook North's Gary Stauffer 8-6. Stauffer finished second in the Russ Erb Memorial Tournament, losing to Tom Stellman of Addison.

Then Saturday, Ujljye won a forfeit from Schaumburg and a 6-0 decision over Barrington's Don Donaldson.

Strength in the underclass program plus 6-6-1 success with a young varsity team has Maine West coach Dick Carlini hoping for excellent upcoming years.

Admittedly, all his sophomores are not winning on varsity. But Real has been excellent at 98 pounds and Brad Bonnier, a Friday night 5-2 loser is still 7-5.

Sophomore Roger Herrera decided Niles West's Mike DiBasilio 5-0 at 155 pounds. But sophomores John Bistany (105), Phil Lambrechts (119) and Tony Mietus (145) all lost decisions.

Bistany lost by two points, Mietus four and Lambrechts seven. Their underclassmen teammates tied 29-29 with the Niles West sophomores.

Maine West won junior-varsity action 48-41 and the freshman meet 56-3 versus Niles West.

Carlini has been forced to shuffle his varsity lineup due to recent injuries. Dave LeFavour moved up to 167 pounds from 155. He lost 7-0 to Ron Capodagli and is now 10-5.

That move was necessary after Jerry Mietus sustained an injured knee that could sideline him permanently. Heavyweight Stan Cordis sustained knee injuries during a recent automobile accident. His status is uncertain.

In other varsity matches, West's Tom Whittington decided Niles' Ron Wilson 4-2 for his 11th victory against five defeats.

Mark Hoozko defeated Bud Blibick 4-0 at 126 pounds and Gary Gunderson beat Don Yohanna 2-0 at 138 pounds.

Maine North absorbed its eighth defeat against Glenbrook South and then captured its third Saturday afternoon at Rolling Meadows.

Horowitz was North's only winner as the Norsemen were drubbed 47-3 by Glenbrook South.

Five teammates joined Horowitz in fighting efforts at Rolling Meadows. Bob Russo won 1-0 over Roger Matix. Tom Travis won 2-0 over David Wallin.

Bob Jaffe defeated Larry Johnson 2-1. Mike Schumacher pinned Don Bohac at 3:43. Bob Kelly pinned Mike Caravello at 4:37. Schumacher and Kelly have 11-6 records.

This Friday, Highland Park will be at Maine East, Maine West at Niles East and New Trier West at Maine North. All are 6:30 p.m. meets.

Saturday, West Leyden and LaGrange Lyons will be at Maine East in a 1:30 p.m. meet. Maine North will compete in the 1 p.m. Reavis Quadrangular.

Smith rolls 706; Morton hits big 3101 in Classic

by GENE KIRKHAM

Morton Pontiac found the range for a powerful 3101 team series as Beverly Lanes hosted the Paddock Classic Traveling League Jan. 27.

With team games of 955, 1082, and 1064 the Morton Bowlers defeated Bank of Rolling Meadows in the only seven-point sweep of the night.

Bill Smith of Morton was the leading scorer in the eight team loop with the second 700 series in the past three weeks. Bill wheeled games of 199, 253, and 254 to tie the high series of the league of 706 set by Don Christensen three weeks ago.

Right behind Smith and also bowling for Morton Bob Glaser blasted 191, 254, and 229 for a 674 series. Bob raised his league-leading average to the 206 mark. Smith's 706 series is even more remarkable in that he is able to bowl only once a week.

Hoffman Lanes and Uncle Andy's Cow Palace battled down to the wire with Hoffman winning four points to Uncle Andy's three. Uncle Andy's won the first game by one pin, 956-955. The second game was a tie with 916 apiece. Hoffman won the third game 999 to 968 and the series 2870 to 2840.

Joe Simons of Uncle Andy's led the scoring in this match with a 658 series. Joe fired 220, 224, and 214. Russ Grosh of Hoffman fired 222, 184, and 245 for a 651 series while Randy Aubert rolled 300, 214, and 193 for 607.

Des Plaines Ace Hardware held on to a one-point lead in this second half by winning five of seven points from Don-Lor. The Ace Hardware bowlers fired 992, 964, and 975 for a 2931 series while Don-Lor rolled 949, 977, and 851 for 2777.

Tom Kouros was high for Ace with 245, 181, and 191 for a 617 series while Don Christensen rolled 600 even with a 231 and a 201 game. Ron Garlich of Don-Lor fired 624 with games of 215, 218, and 191.

Gaare Oil defeated Kula's Five two games and the series for a five-point win to stay within one point of league-leading Ace Hardware. Fred Hansen of Kula was the leading scorer in this match. With games of 226, 204, and 211, Hansen fired a 641 series to raise his average to the 200 mark. Gene Kirkham of Gaare rolled 606 including games of 204 and 236.

With only seven points separating sixth place from first, this week's match games at Rolling Meadows Bowl can only add to the excitement. Saturday's match games scheduled are as follows: Morton Pontiac vs. Gaare Oil Company; Des Plaines Ace Hardware vs. Uncle Andy's Cow Palace; Hoffman Lanes vs. Don-Lor; and Kula's Five vs. Bank of Rolling Meadows.

Team Standings:
Des Plaines Ace Hardware ..... 20
Gaare Oil Company ..... 19
Morton Pontiac ..... 18
Uncle Andy's Cow Palace ..... 17
Hoffman Lanes ..... 14

At Rolling Meadows

Al Miller registered the high series of 588, plus the only 200 game with a 210, in the Palatine Majors League at Rolling Meadows Bowl. . . . Walgren came up with a consistent 186-188-183 series for 557 . . . the league's senior bowler, Al Hapke with a 130 average, had a 191 game and 468 series.

Marine engines in all classes — outboard, inboard, inboard/outboard and jet drive — continue to get bigger every year as dramatized by the displays of motors to be shown at the Chicago Boat and Sports Show, the boating industry's giant public exposition.

Most powerful outboard motor ever unveiled at the Show, to be held Feb. 8-10 at Chicago's McCormick Place.

Mercury Marine, Fond du Lac, Wis., will present the Merc 1500, a 150 hp rated motor with six cylinders. The engine incorporates "power-ported" pistons as an additional source of fuel/air mixture to the combustion chambers. Also new from Mercury is an 85 hp, four-cylinder model.

Johnson Motors of Waukegan has also upped the power on its largest outboard to 135 hp, most powerful ever made by the company. The motor features pressure back piston rings which provide less friction, less engine wear and better fuel economy. For 1973, Johnson offers 12 outboard models, from the little 2 hp up to the 135.

Also producing a 135 hp outboard is Evinrude Motors, Milwaukee, Wis. Included in the motor are thinner reed valves, a new combustion chamber shape and a new porting technique. Evinrude has also added seven cubic inches to its 115 hp motor, now rated at 99.6 cu. in.

Chrysler Corp., Detroit, Mich., will introduce new models in two horsepower categories. Additions to the line include 25 and 30 hp motors with manual or electric starting. The company will also display an all-new jet propulsion system for family runabouts and ski boats.

Sportsman's Notebook

by Bob Holiday

KING LANDNER or Rod Serling couldn't have written the script any better. In fact, as intelligent journalists, neither would have found the idea believable. But Gene Tenace always knew it was possible, if only he could get the chance.

Tenace (pronounced, like it looks, ten-ace) was drafted by the Kansas City Athletics out of his graduating class at Lucasville, Ohio High School and was shipped immediately to the Florida League where he toiled as a catcher in the minor league of baseball.

Physically, the Florida sun didn't do any more for him than the southern Ohio sun had done, except, perhaps to push his forehead a little further into his hairline. But he got to play a lot of baseball.

He also met a local businessman who liked baseball players and fishing and Tenace became one of his regular guests.

Tenace remembers that the kids he grew up with weren't quite ready to risk their health fishing the Ohio river, so they concentrated instead on catfishing in area farm ponds.

So he wasn't exactly a beginner, when he hooked his first largemouth bass in a private Florida lake. "All the catfish we caught were tough and good fighters," he said, "but they never broke water the way a bass does when he's hooked."

Tenace remembers, he said, the very first bass he caught and most of them since. But he went on to "bigger" things after he got his first taste of saltwater fishing.

"There are always guys who are ready to do favors for athletes, and there was this one guy who took me deep sea fishing for the first time. At first it was just an enjoyable boat ride," he remembered, "but then it all happened at once. We were trolling three lines and two of them sprung at the same time. One had a king mackerel on it, but the one I grabbed had a sail. That was all it took to get me completely hooked on saltwater fishing!"

When Charlie Finley moved his Kansas City Athletics to the greener pastures of Oakland, Calif., he took Tenace along as a reserve catcher. It was a frustrating career for the young ballplayer. Although his bat was working at a .305 average, he didn't like dwelling in the ignominy of the "utility" list. His second year in the majors he hit .274, but no one seemed to notice.

Still, he kept ego and sanity together by enjoying the California outdoors. With his wife Linda and their two daughters, he spent as much time as he could hiking and camping. Last season he hooked up with two other ballplayers who know the bitter flavor of "second string." Bob Locker and Don Mincher. The three began planning days-off to include duck and deer hunting and, when bay area weather allowed it, some offshore fishing. "The three of us get along well," Tenace said through his new, mod mustache. "But we also notice what a lot of other people who like the outdoors have noticed. Too many campers and hikers are plain litterbugs."

All this time, Tenace was catching now-and-again and hitting even less regularly. By World Series time last October, his batting average was a dismal .225 and he had hit just five home runs all season. (He had some highlights in his three year Major League career, including catching Vida Blue's 1970 no-hitter, and he knocked in the winning run that beat Detroit for the 1972 American League Championship.)

He had also learned to catch rainbow trout and he had bagged his first four point whitetail deer. The hunting season was interrupted by the opening of the 1972 World Series in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

His first time at bat ever, in a World Series, he knocked the ball out of the park. His next time at bat he did it again. And he drove in all three of his team's runs in their 3 - 2 upset of the Reds.

In the fourth game of the Series, Tenace struck again, with a home run in Oakland to help the A's to a 3 - 2 win. When he belted a three-run homer in the fifth game, he tied a Series record held by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig with four home runs in one Series. He had also broken Ruth's World Series slugging percentage record with .914 and found himself the runaway winner of the Series Most Valuable Player Award, not to mention his proudest possession, a World Series ring.

Naturally, the offers poured in for Tenace, beseeching him to attend every kind of banquet and dinner. But he headed back to Lucasville, Ohio to help his father-in-law harvest the Christmas tree crop on the family's farm.

"Money isn't really the answer to everything," Tenace said sincerely. "Some day the money will be gone. I'm not trying to be too much of the 'All-American Boy' type," he smiled, "but young kids really ought to realize that they have to look after their health all their lives. And looking after their health includes looking after the world they're living in."

Tenace, instead of joining the waist-expanding banquet circuit in the off-season, has joined the McCullough Corp., as their sports consultant. In his appearances he stresses responsible management of woodlands, waters and parks. McCullough, not unaware of the damage that a chainsaw can do in irresponsible hands, has mounted a campaign of public education, stressing logical and intelligent use of their popular product. Tenace in accord with the arrangement agreeable and in line with his own concern for the environment.

As for baseball: Oakland A's manager Dick Williams plans to play Tenace at first base, in place of the departed Mike Epstein. Tenace is certain that the opportunity to play everyday will mean a new light on his baseball career.

He likes Charlie Finley, he says, and credits him with making significant contributions to the game. He reported that it took only two hours of negotiations for them to arrive at an agreeable contract for the 1973 season. He believes the designated pinch-hitter rule will be most advantageous to some of the older hitters in baseball who can't play every day.

And, yes, he did eventually receive that controversial $5,000 bonus promised him by Finley for his superlative World Series performance, in spite of the fact that the commissioner's office didn't think it was such a hot idea.

Wheeling hosts frosh mat invite

Wheeling will inaugurate a new annual freshman invitational wrestling tourney this Saturday, Feb. 3, at 10 a.m.

Seven schools have been invited over to join with the Wildcat frosh in kicking off the new tournament. The lineup includes Addison Trail, Carmel of Mundelein, Elk Grove, Glenbrook North, Holy Cross, Libertyville and Maine South.

The whole gathering will be run off Saturday. A 4 p.m. championship round will follow up the 10 a.m. first round preliminaries.

Tickets are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Countryside 'Y' posts big wins

Jubilant Countryside tankers gloried to a whopping 261 to 62 win for the girls and a decisive 209 to 90 victory for the boys over Park Ridge Y.M.C.A. last Saturday.

Putting it all together in the "Y" meet of the season, the spirited "Ninth" swimmers cheered performances by Mark Smith in the Junior 100 yard freestyle and Marie Spicuzza in the 100 yard Individual medley. Young swimmers, Jenny Andrews, Linda McLean, Kate Quinn, Holly Rydin, Sara Olsen, and Julie Lux scored well for the team.

The next co-ed meet will be at Elmhurst on Saturday.

RESPONSES TO THE possible extinction of tigers which takes effect April 30. To the average citizen, the law means they may not possess any animal threatened with extinction nor can they own any clothing products made from skins of the designated animals.

'Endangered species' law takes effect May 1

Buying alligator shoes will be illegal

by BARRY SIGALE

If you're planning to use your hard earned money to buy your wife a leopard-skin coat or yourself an alligator belt for next Christmas, you'd better do so by April 30.

Because after that date it will be illegal to purchase any item made out of leopard or alligator or any other so-called endangered species as specified by the Illinois Department of Conservation.

Known as the Illinois Endangered Species Protection Act, signed by former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie last August, the law is aimed at protecting wildlife the U.S. Secretary of the Interior feels is threatened with extinction. The department has even published a list of those animals covered by the act.

UNDER THE NEW LAW, the average citizen is prohibited from possessing, selling, offering for sale, giving or disposing of any animal or wild animal product of any animal that is an endangered species listed under the act.

Those exempt from the above are any person, firm, association or corporation that possesses, purchases and disposes of these animals or animal products for zoological, educational or scientific purposes.

Others not affected by the law are those persons who possess such animals or animal products prior to April 30. This last category includes items of animal product clothing.

In both cases, machinery will be set up by the department that will make it mandatory for persons involved to obtain permits in compliance with the law.

Penalties for violating the act include fines of not less than $100 or more than $1,000 and/or up to one year in jail. All fines collected will be deposited in the game and fish fund.

A nine-member board will be appointed by the governor, but no appropriations have yet been made to provide for the carrying out of the law.

THE ACT PROVIDES that "any officer or agent authorized by the Department of Conservation, or any police officer of any municipality within the state of Illinois, may execute any warrant to search for and seize any goods, merchandise or wildlife sold or offered for sale in violation of this section, or any property or item used in connection with a violation of this section.

"Such goods, merchandise, wildlife or property shall be held pending proceedings in any court of proper jurisdiction.

Upon conviction, such seized goods, merchandise or wildlife shall be forfeited and, upon forfeiture, either offered to a recognized institution for scientific or educational purposes, or destroyed."

Though the language in the act sounds tough it is not known how effective the new law will be. According to Mark Tuttle, Chicago office manager for the department, the new law should prove successful.

"It was the feeling in the Illinois General Assembly to help police and regulate the traffic of endangered species," Tuttle said. "This is in addition to the federal government regulating these species from coming into the country in the first place."

TUTTLE SAID it was not the intention of the law or his department to "create hardships on anyone or burden anyone. We don't want to nitpick on this. We're not going out and making mass arrests on May 1. I don't even know if people will be stopped on the street and asked to show a permit."

He added that some people don't even know what material their clothing is made of. Sometimes they get a gift, he said, but they don't know what it's made of.

The wildlife, mainly exotic animals from tropical or subtropical areas around the world, which are currently listed as endangered species include:

Leopards, snow leopards, clouded leopards, tigers, cheetahs, alligators, crocodiles, vicunas, red wolves, gray wolves, polar bears, mountain lions, jaguars, ocelots, margays, desert kit foxes, kit or swift foxes, Pacific ridley turtles and green turtles.

No wildlife in Illinois is affected or endangered, according to Tuttle.

Maybe you should invest more in a newspaper than just a dime.

Professional journalism has a lot to offer, if you are willing to invest more than just your money.

Today's newspapers need skilled reporters who are willing to dig for the facts, and report them fairly to the public.

Newspapers need good photographers and printers to give the news a visual impact. They need editors to sort and interpret the significance of world events.

The benefits are many. Professional journalism offers a sense of responsibility and the satisfaction that you have helped to make your fellow man more aware.

So next time you invest a dime, think about the bargain you'd make if you would invest in a career... Journalism.

Aging Process

by Ed Landwehr

As any liquor store patron will tell you, the stock improves with age, but alas, television sets do not. And replacing worn-out components with new ones doesn't mean that other parts improve. In some rare cases a deficiency can be increased.

This is the reason that Landwehr's Home Appliances, 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights, keeps a servicing record of your set. All our servicing replacements carry substantial guarantees, and we maintain your set so you get the longest period of viewing enjoyment. Our testing instruments are of the latest design so we can do a thorough job quickly and accurately.

Phone 255-0700 next time and let us show you how our services are improving with age, too.

The Lighter Side...by Dick West

Titles that never made it . . .

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Several years ago, someone recorded a hit album of musical lemons called "Smash Flops." But I didn't realize what a market there was for that sort of thing until I recently wrote a column about "Famous Novels that Didn't Make It," a new game invented by playwright Jane Stanton.

Judging from the letters I've received, misguided masterpieces are universally popular. Whether it be a song, play, book or television program, nearly everyone loves a loser.

A WOMAN IN Ohio writes: "As examples of famous novels that didn't make it, you mentioned 'Around the World in 80 Days,' 'Catch-21' and 'The Postman Only Rings Once.'"

"How could you possibly have omitted the famous novel that didn't make it as the father of science fiction? I refer, of course, to 19,999 Leagues Under the Sea."

A reader in Pennsylvania took me to task for not including some of the famous children's books that didn't make it.

"Don't you realize," he wrote, "that an entire generation of Americans grew up without reading 'The Bobbsey Triplets?'"

And a member of the literary in Atlanta told me I had offended Southerners in every section of the nation by leaving out "Gone with the Wind."

"If Margaret Mitchell hadn't written that book during a dead calm, it might have been the Great American Novel," he opined.

FAMOUS SONGS that didn't make it also have their partisans.

A nostalgic chap in California called me on the phone to hum a few bars of "I Found a Thousand Dollar Baby in a Green Stamp Redemption Store."

"Had it not been for inflation, this song might have helped kill vaudeville," he said.

A devotee of classical music brought to my attention the piece of rotten luck that befell Piotr Ilich Tchaikovsky when he composed the "1812" Overture.

"Tchaikovsky was ahead of his time," he said. "If he had waited a year to write that overture his music would still be played today."

IT REMAINED, however, for a history student in Oregon to point out that smash flops also occur outside the field of fine arts. Some slogans don't make it either.

"Think back to the period of westward expansion when the United States was quarrelling with England over the Oregon Territory," she wrote.

"Had the people been aroused by the slogan '53-39 or Fight,' America would never have gotten beyond the Alleghenies."

Quirks in the news

Smoking, drinking stunt growth—for 102 years

Alvin Wetmore of Croville, Calif., can't get around well enough to dance anymore, but he still smokes a pack of cigarettes and sips three glasses of bourbon a day.

That's not bad for a one-time "bulwhacker" in the Oklahoma Indian Territory who celebrated his 102nd birthday Sunday. Wetmore ran away from his Chippewa Falls, Wis., home when he was nine, took up smoking and got a job hauling wood in Oklahoma. While not attributing his long life to smoking and drinking, neither could he offer any reason for living more than a century.

idea was to make alcoholics feel at home in a familiar atmosphere, where they can be helped rather than hurt. Alcoholics would be able to obtain counseling at the tavern, and it would serve as a reference station for hospital detoxification units.

IN GEORGIA, moonshining has entered the age of technology. When federal agents uncovered a still, they were surprised to discover how complicated the operation was. "It takes a guy with an engineering degree to know how to set up one of these things," one agent said.

ELSEWHERE in California, the drinking water in Sausalito is enough to turn a scotch and water man to soda. The water is suffering from "pine needles syndrome."

"We really can't describe it," says James Frankopf of the water district. "It tastes so different it really shakes people up." The metallic, medicinal, heavily chlorinated, foul taste appears to be caused by the mixing of chlorine and the noli, a chemical released by dead pine needles when water runs over them on its way to reservoirs.

IF REFORMED alcoholics don't like the taste of Sausalito water, they can always drive to Oakland, where a bar has been set up that will only serve coffee, fruit juices, milk and soda pop.

The director of the Alameda County Health Care Services Agency said the

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Regarding the current use of more earthy and frank material on video, a colleague has sent along a note recalling a period in the past when the home medium also was considered a bit bold.

"It was," he writes, "television in its early years, say, through the middle 1950s, that was the daring one in subject matter as compared to the movies."

"That was when Paddy Chayefsky and all of those other early TV dramatists, and Fred Coe and all of those other early TV directors and producers were turning out weekly air dramas on a number of established programs.

"Now, of course, they were not quite so bold about this as TV is today, but it is a fact that they dealt often with subjects that the movies did not dare touch at that time.

"THIS RESULTED eventually in the movies opening up, virtually abandoning the strict censorship of many years. Once the movies, more or less out of desperation, took off in the way of subject matter, it was Katy-bar-the-door, and for some years, it was television, that in comparison, appeared to be hanging back in this respect.

"Then ... television in the past couple of years began to let down the bars, surpassing the boldness of its early years." Related to these points, one can note that the haste of the movies to lure audiences with bolder material after video made its presence felt years ago was part of a competitive reaction in dealing with the television medium as a whole.

The movies also realized that television was, in effect, turning out much of the kind of material that the studios had produced as B pictures. This type of entertainment was being seen on video chiefly in the routine and often bland regular series of weekly Westerns, detective tales and family stories. And so B pictures were sharply downgraded at the studios, although many of the A films in production costs continued to be of B quality.

NOW, OF COURSE, ironies abound in the movie-television relationship. The big motion pictures that were made, in part, to lure people from video are being seen on the home screen — sold to broadcasters by movie people. Movie companies make shows for television. Video is going in for more spectacular productions, often of an outdoor nature.

And while there used to be an emphasis on largeness in movies, there is a big drive now to keep motion picture costs down — which, combined with new focus on story material rather than size, often results in movies that look like television dramas but are shown on theater screens.

There's not much new under the sun when it comes to human or corporate nature.

MICROPHONE IS LIKE 'EARDRUM' IN NEW HEARING AID

Minneapolis, Minn. A new hearing aid just introduced is expected to offer more usable power, superior sound reproduction, and be more trouble free, thanks to a new development in hearing aid microphone design. Called the "Dresser," the small behind-the-ear type aid features a microphone which simulates the human eardrum to move one of the most common hearing aid problems. A spokesman for Malco Hearing Instruments, makers of the aid, explained the advantages of the new microphone.

"The most delicate part of a hearing aid has always been the tiny 'link' that connects a human ear, which connects to the microphone diaphragm. In the new microphone, this link has been replaced by a membrane, which might be compared to the human eardrum. The new microphone's lack of sensitivity to mechanical vibrations is expected to result in one very important benefit for hearing aid wearers: aids may be used at higher volume settings without annoying feedback and distortion. Receptionally 'clean,' clear sound is claimed for the 'Dresser' aid. A hearing aid engineer making component tests between the new microphone and a standard unit described the difference as between a hi-fi system and a table radio.

Full information on the new aid is available by writing Malco Hearing Instruments, 7375 Bush Lake Road, Minneapolis, Minn. 55425.

B&PW: the working woman's best friend

by MONICA WILCH

"It's the best thing working women have going for them!"

This is one woman's enthusiastic appraisal of the Business & Professional Women's Club. Founded after World War I at the instigation of a man — President Woodrow Wilson — the club is a nationwide federation.

In this district there are three B & PW chapters, the largest and oldest being the 91-member Mount Prospect club, which was chartered in 1960. President of this club is Marian Henken, a journalist employed as an editor by Technical Publications of Barrington.

"I learned a lot from the others," this delightful and well-informed woman says of her association with the club. A member since the club's founding, Miss Henken has been a working journalist for some 20 years, following her graduation from the University of Illinois.

The learning opportunity comes in part from the diversification of the club's members. Of all ages and educational backgrounds, the women in the Mount Prospect club range from lawyer, fashion coordinator, teacher and speech therapist to shop owners, bank officers, postmasters and office supervisors.

But most important, according to the women, is the friendship they find in the club.

"WHEN THEY were after me to join," recalled Betty Bolanos, office manager at Kelly Oldsmobile in Arlington Heights, "I thought, 'ugh, not another women's club!' But I really liked it — I liked the members."

A vibrant mother of two children, aged 18 and 10, Mrs. Bolanos joined the club five years ago and is currently its vice president. A 20-year veteran of the auto business ("I didn't know one car from another when I started!"), Mrs. Bolanos talked about some of the work of the B&PW.

"The national B&PW was one of the earliest supporters of equal rights for women, dating back to 1922 — not just since Women's Lib," she explained, adding that Illinois Rep. Eugenia Chapman belongs to the club, "and we're behind her 100 per cent!" Mrs. Chapman has been a strong supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment in the Illinois legislature.

For their part in the ERA struggle, the Mount Prospect B&PW members wrote letters to their representatives and participated in rallies, according to the club's energetic publicity chairman, Lyn Grelack.

THE MOTHER of a 26-year-old daughter and 9-year-old son, Mrs. Grelack is a broker for RAL Realty and also operates her own secretarial service. Another lifelong career woman, Mrs. Grelack also is the first woman to serve on the board of directors of the Mount Prospect Chamber of Commerce, which recently presented her an award for distinguished service.

A two-year member of the B&PW, Mrs. Grelack enjoys the club for both its social and educational opportunities.

An important aspect of the club for Mrs. Norma Divito is its civic and philanthropic activity. Current treasurer of the club, Mrs. Divito described the various scholarships sponsored by both the local chapter and the national federation. Locally, the Mount Prospect group finances girls who wish to study fashion design at Harper College. They also contribute to the B&PW career advancement scholarships for women who want to get back into the business world and need further education or training, she said.

Mrs. Divito herself returned to work four years ago after rearing four children. She is employed in inventory and quality control for SGA Scientific in Elk Grove Village.

"YOU CAN ONLY take so much PTA and church guilds," remarked Mrs. Divito in explaining the special appeal the B&PW has for working women. But the women were quick to add that most members also participate in other organizations, such as their professional societies or church groups.

Special activities of the club, according to 4-year member Dorothy Karger, include VIP night when members bring their husbands and bosses to dinner, as well as the annual fashion show.

Miss Karger, who lives in Des Plaines, has been employed with Corporate Policyholders Counsel Inc. of Chicago for 16 years, and is now an employee benefits coordinator for the firm.

The Mount Prospect club has sponsored three other B&PW clubs in the area, including the Elk Grove Village club.

Three members of that group discussed what interests them most among the activities of the B&PW — its involvement in equal rights for women.

ACCORDING TO Lee Turner, who is manager of new accounts at the Bank of Elk Grove, statistics indicate that the income of women is decreasing, despite the Women's Lib movement. Mrs. Turner theorized that "it's because employees look at a man as the sole support of a family," but added, "I am, too."

Mrs. Turner, along with Alicia Robertson, who is employed with Fleming Real Estate, and Jackie Horanckek, supervisor of installment loans at the Bank of Elk Grove, fully support the B&PW's efforts to achieve higher standards for working women. Each recalled instances in her own career when capable women were passed over for managerial positions or paid less for a job than a man was paid.

"Banks have been No. 1 in discrimination although they are loosening up," commented one of the women, but another noted that "our organization has made it clear that a woman won't be a manager."

Besides participating in the struggle for equal rights, these women have had other irons in the fire as well. Mrs. Robertson recently opened a thrift shop in partnership with a friend, and Mrs. Turner for a while owned and operated her own employment agency.

FOR ANY WOMAN who is a member of B&PW, "non-involvement" is practically an unknown word.

"I guess we're joiners," quipped one woman, but it's more than just a club they have joined. All have a history of active participation in life.

"I STARTED at the bottom and worked my way up," says Betty Bolanos of her career in the automobile business. An important part of Mrs.

Bolanos' work-world is her participation in the Mount Prospect Business & Professional Women's Club.

Strictly feminist platform

Women's party formed in Belgium

by RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A political party for women — maybe the only one in the world — has been formed in Belgium.

Its idea is to get more women into parliament and, with luck, to win a place in government coalition, so that some of Belgium's particularly demeaning laws on women's rights can be changed.

"Why shouldn't we try?" said Adele Hauwel, a founder of the Parti Feministe Unifié (PFU). "We don't say it is the only way to improve women's rights. But it's one new way that has never been used."

The party was founded in September by Miss Hauwel, an intense, gray-haired veteran of women's rights organizations, and three friends, Nina Ariol, Claire Blin-Jourdain and Renee Waty-Fosseprez. The aim now is to build the party's strength so it can enter candidates in as many districts as possible in the next parliamentary election, which could come any time in the next three years. According to Miss Blin-Jourdain, there already are "several hundred" members in 50 branches — most of them in Brussels — with "new members coming in every day."

PARLIAMENTARY elections, however, can come at any time. If held now, the PFU believes it could field candidates in most Brussels districts. In two years, Miss Blin-Jourdain said, it could have a candidate in "most" of the nation's districts.

Miss Hauwel said that as far as she knew, the only other women's party was in the Netherlands "and they're only a pressure group, not a real party because they had no candidates in the general election in November."

Miss Hauwel said she helped start the PFU because "women here feel like a minority group even though the majority in Belgium are women. To make real changes, women must actually get into high political office. When you are not in the government, you can only try to influence those who really have the power."

What the party wants is "the standard feminist platform," she said — equal rights, equal opportunities, equal pay, legalized abortion (a touchy issue in this Roman Catholic nation) and dissemination of family planning information.

IT ALSO WANTS the repeal of "laws discriminating against women." In Belgium, women cannot open bank accounts, get a loan or dispose of their own property without their husbands' written permission. A divorced woman cannot remarry for 300 days and the law gives husbands the right to make major decisions, such as the education of children, while women have only the right to appeal these decisions to a court.

"We want it equal," Miss Hauwel said. "We want women to be able to decide, too, with the husband also having the right to appeal."

So far, women play little role in Belgian politics. Of the 390 members of Parliament, only 12 are women. None sits in the cabinet. Women also are short of power in major pressure groups, such as trade unions.

The founders are flinty about personal questions, which they consider patronizing. There are eight children among the four, Miss Hauwel said, but she refused to say which ones were married.

"We also refuse to answer questions like, 'Does your husband agree with you?'" she said. "Such questions are never put to men in politics, so we don't answer if they are put to us."

ONLY MISS HAUWEL among the four never worked with a political party. But only one — Miss Waty-Fosseprez — currently holds an office. A city councillor in the Brussels suburb of Etterbeek, she recently renounced her party and claims now that her seat is the first to be held by the PFU.

Belgian governments are always coalitions of parties, and the PFU's chance for power lies in joining such a coalition. On this, Miss Hauwel says that "we must wait and see — first, whether its candidates are elected, and then, whether any established party will win the PFU's support by pledging itself to women's rights."

The PFU concentrates solely on women's rights and takes no stand on other issues such as defense, the economy or pollution — even on the acrimonious split between Belgium's French-speakers and Flemish speakers.

"WE ARE STRICTLY feminist," Miss Hauwel said. "We don't care if a woman is young or old, Catholic or Protestant, socialist or other. They face no challenge from the PFU." Miss Hauwel said it will neither run candidates against the 12 women already in parliament nor try to lure them into the party "because we don't want them to risk losing their place in Parliament. We know they are doing their best."

The party finances itself by a membership fee of 100 francs ($2.27) plus donations. It anticipates no problems getting on the ballot.

"We need only 500 signatures to get on a list," Miss Hauwel said, smiling, mentally eyeing Belgium's 5 million women, "and that's not exactly impossible."

Board games people play

by KAY MARCH

(Second of two parts)

If you, with your family or friends, were going to be stranded on a desert island for an indefinite period of time and you could take just one board game with you, which one would you choose?

If one can judge from sales, the answer has to be Monopoly. According to the "Guinness Book of World Records," Parker Brothers, Inc., sold more than 65 million sets by January of 1972. The popular real estate game is produced in at least 12 languages.

Monopoly mints turn out a daily print of "money" equivalent to 215 million "dollars," or considerably more than the roughly $50 million daily output of the U.S. mints. A year or so ago, a California waterbed manufacturer achieved fleeting fame by using real money to play Monopoly with his friends.

Monopoly contests have been conducted just about everywhere. Again according to Guinness, the most protracted non-stop Monopoly session was one of 127½ hours, set by four students of Dundee (Scotland) University in April, 1972.

The first Intercollegiate Underwater-Monopoly Tournament was held in California in 1970.

THE GAME was invented back in 1930 by Charles Darrow, an unemployed engineer. Because Darrow and his wife liked Atlantic City, that was the town whose street names he borrowed for his game. When Atlantic City celebrated the 100th anniversary of its boardwalk in 1970, a special Monopoly Week was observed and a bronze marker memorializing the association was placed at the corner of Park Place and Boardwalk.

What makes Monopoly such a good game? Actually, it isn't. Even its most enthusiastic advocates admit that it's complicated and takes too long to play. Yet it continues to appeal to the oncoming generations. Getting old enough to play Monopoly by and for yourself is still, in many families, an important milestone on a youngster's path to adulthood.

Then what makes Monopoly so appealing? There are many possible answers. However, one popular theory holds that, just as earlier board games were designed to teach morality and build character, so did Monopoly inculcate predominant values of 20th century America with its emphasis on financial returns and purely materialistic goals. Of course, Monopoly was invented in 1930, during the Depression. It's easy to understand how an unemployed player, with only small change or no change in his pocket, could enjoy handling thousands of dollars, even in play money. Too, according to at least one professor, the game did (and does) teach several sound principles of profitable real estate investment, with its emphasis on the importance of a good location and its pyramiding returns for developed property.

EVEN TODAY'S affluent and persuasibly more idealistic society seems to share the same latent streak of greed. One might suggest, however, that the game could be updated to conform more realistically to contemporary economic conditions. Where today, for instance, could you pay a school tax of only $150? Or find a space that offered you free parking? Or take a ride on the Reading Railroad for a paltry $25?

On the other hand, even at today's inflationary prices, it would be difficult to spend the game's top price of $2,600 for a single stay in a hotel, even one so plush as you might expect to find on the Boardwalk. So perhaps it's better to leave Monopoly just the way it is. Somehow, it's nice to think that once there was a land, even an imaginary land, where you could pay a doctor's fee of just $50, get out of the hospital for only $100 and collect a whopping $200 simply for passing "Go." You could even build a hotel for a mere $250, though that was on Baltic, which was very definitely in the low-rent district. It cost considerably more to build a hotel on the Boardwalk: $1,000. But then, as everybody who ever played Monopoly learned the hard (i.e. expensive) way, the one who owns the Boardwalk always seems to win the game.

A BOOK LOOK: I haven't seen it yet, but am looking forward to reading a new book by Marvin Kaye called "A Toy Is Born." According to advance reviews, it recounts (and very entertainingly) the success stories of Monopoly and other famous toys and games.

BUSINESSWOMAN Lyn Grelack has found the B&PW "most enjoyable," and to provide financial help for education, she adds, "You learn so much in education and business purposes. this club." The B&PW strives to im-

The wedding date will be set later.

A '70 graduate of Arlington High School, Ruth is in her junior year at Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill. Her fiancé is a '72 graduate of Augustana now doing graduate work at Northern Illinois University.

Cathy Rowe weds classmate

Seniors at the University of Tulsa, Cathy Lynn Rowe and Michael Thomas Kmita are back to school since Jan. 6 as man and wife.

They were married at noon in St. James Catholic Church, Arlington Heights, where Cathy and her family, the W. John Rowes, worship. Afterwards there was a luncheon for 125 wedding guests at the Black Fox Restaurant in Rolling Meadows Holiday Inn.

Cathy and Michael spent the weekend in Chicago before returning to Oklahoma to continue their studies. She will graduate in June in elementary education and he will get a degree next December in biology education.

MICHAEL is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Kmita of Allen Park, Mich. He met his bride on the university campus where she is affiliated with Kappa Delta sorority.

Cathy and her family live at 1111 W. Oakton in Arlington and she is a '69 graduate of Arlington High School.

On her wedding day, the bride wore a circlet of opals and seed pearls at the high neckline of her white sate gown. The pin, which had belonged to her great-grandmother, was the "something old" in her ensemble.

Cathy's dress was styled with Belgium lace trimming the neck and front of the fitted bodice, the Camolot sleeves and detachable train. Her headpiece was a band of Belgium lace holding a long veil in place, and her bouquet was a cascade of Amazon lilies with red Garnet roses and ivy.

Her maid of honor, Valerie K. Voise of Arlington Heights, wore a royal blue velvet gown with white sate collar and sleeves. The bodice had blue and white floral embroidered ribbon trim. Valerie carried a bouquet to match her dress.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kmita

There were also three bridesmaids wearing the same ensembles. They included Christine Kmita, the groom's sister, and two sorority sisters of the bride, Carol Hansel and Mrs. Elaine McGoffin of Tulsa.

Michael Shea of Allen Park was Michael's best man, while the couple's brothers, Thomas J. Rowe and Gerrard Kmita, ushered along with Gregory Olander, the groom's cousin from Flat Rock, Mich.

A honeymoon at The Abbey

Jo Ann Huebner and her bridegroom Scott Ryan honeymooned at the Abbey at Lake Geneva following their wedding Jan. 13 in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights. They are now making their home in a Rolling Meadows apartment.

Jo Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Huebner, 606 Cedar Lane, Mount Prospect, is a '71 graduate of Hersey High School, and Scott, son of Mr. Marlene Ryan, Rolling Meadows, is a '72 graduate of Arlington High School. Jo Ann is employed by the American National Bank and Trust Co., Chicago, and Scott is with Honeywell, Inc., Arlington Heights. The pair met at the wedding of mutual friends.

The wedding service was both candlelight and double ring, and took place at 5:30 p.m. Jo Ann chose a white chiffon gown with lace bodice with Juliet sleeves and lace overlay on the skirt. She wore a short veil and carried white roses and baby's breath.

Claudia Olson, Arlington Heights, was maid of honor, and Nancy Nell, Mount Prospect, was bridesmaid. Both wore light blue crepe gowns with Juliet sleeves, and carried pink and blue carnations and baby's breath with blue and white streamers.

Dennis Hogreve of Arlington Heights, 7-year-old cousin of the groom, was ring bearer. Best man was Ed Bublitz, Arlington Heights, and usher was Jack Legg Jr., Arlington Heights.

A reception for 75 guests was held in the church cafeteria.

Next On The Agenda

BETA SIGMA PHI
Kappa Kappa Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will install Mrs. John Mersereau, Mount Prospect, as vice president at Thursday's meeting. Mrs. Richard Monday, vice president, who is moving from Des Plaines to Houston, Texas, will be hostess. Transferees and members-at-large in the area are invited and may call Mrs. Charles Brown, Mount Prospect, for transportation.

LEGION AUXILIARY
Mrs. Reinhardt Wolf, a past council president and unit 38 delegate from Des Plaines, will be among Legion Auxiliary members attending the meeting Friday of the Cook County Council, first division, at the LaSalle Hotel.

Ninth District, to which area units belong, will service the USO parties in February.

DES PLAINES WOMEN
A book review by Martha Hopkins will be the program Monday for Des Plaines Woman's Club. Mrs. Hopkins will review "Green Darkness," a best selling novel about Tudor England.

The group will be meeting at 12:30 for dessert luncheon in Rand Park Field House. Hostess will be Mrs. T. R. Napier, assisted by Mrs. T. H. Ouderkerk. Committee members are Mrs. Raburn, Mrs. Galen Jarvis and Miss Edith Anderson.

SAINTPAULIA SOCIETY
A review of the Society, its history and a discussion of past and future will highlight next Tuesday's meeting of the Suburban Saintpaulia Society. Hostess for the 11 a.m. meeting will be Mrs. Michael De Met, 102 E. McDonald Road, Prospect Heights.

CLIPPED WINGS
Members of TWA Clipped Wings, Chicago Chapter, will meet Feb. 6 at noon at the home of Mrs. John O'Mara, 1407 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights, for a salad luncheon.

New officers, including Mrs. Sam H. McGoun of Arlington Heights and Mrs. Joseph A. Kafka of Palatine, will discuss plans for the May fashion show. It will benefit Human Growth, Inc., an organization concerned with growth problems in children.

Those attending the luncheon will bring a dish to serve eight and the recipe for it, and may call Mrs. O'Mara at 439-0408 by Sunday for reservations. Any former TWA hostess and her guests are welcome.

Mt. Prospect Juniors collecting 20,000 Betty Crocker coupons

Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club is asking area women to save Betty Crocker coupons for the club's special project to support the Levinson Foundation.

The youth department of the Juniors is collecting a total of 20,000 coupons in order to receive $100 which will then be given to the foundation.

Levinson Foundation, supported by private contributions, is a free facility for mentally retarded children dedicated to improving their future and giving meaning to their lives. The program offers diagnosis and treatment, education and research. The research is carried on with the cooperation of Hektoen Institute of Cook County Hospital.

ANYONE HAVING Betty Crocker coupons to donate to the club is asked to call Mrs. Bruce Longman, 392-8484, as soon as possible. She will arrange to pick them up.

The youth department of the club recently purchased and refinished forty chairs, obtained from School District 57. These chairs were then delivered to Suburban Head Start, which has a building in Palatine and one in Des Plaines.

Coordinators of the project were Mrs. Della Facchini, office manager of Northwest Suburban Head Start, Inc.; J. C. Busenhardt, business manager of Dist. 57; and Mrs. Robert Ferguson and Mrs. Longman, co-chairmen of the youth department.

Secretaries to hear concert pianist

Park-Plaines Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) will hold a dinner meeting at the Marriott Hotel at 7 next Wednesday evening, Feb. 7.

Special guest will be Gloria Greene, Schaumburg, concert pianist who studied for 15 years under Elmer Laginska, composer and pianist in England. Miss Greene has concertized since childhood and has played with most of the major symphonies including the New York Philharmonic, Boston, Philadelphia and Buffalo. She is a partner in Bouchee Associates, an artists' management firm in New York and Beverly Hills, California. As part of this firm she has produced music festivals in Cape Cod, New York and Edinburgh, Scotland.

All secretaries employed or living in the area are invited.

Reservations and additional information are available from Mrs. Jerry Dady, 233-6148, after 6 p.m. or Mrs. Adeline Clemmons, 378-7870 during the day.

New member coffee for Elk Grovers

A coffee for all new women in Elk Grove Village area is planned by Elk Grove Village Junior Woman's Club. The coffee will be held next Tuesday.

Mrs. Mel Condon, membership chairman, may be reached at 437-8871 for further information. New members will be taken into the club at the Feb. 14 meeting.

Juniors entertained their husbands at the Camelot Restaurant Jan. 20 for their annual Husbands' Night. The evening included a 7-course meal and dance music by the Tradewinds.

Rules set for spring contest, showing of arts and crafts

Anyone interested in marketing or displaying their original arts and crafts in a spring show in Hoffman Estates had better get started.

The show, sponsored by Gamma Theta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International, is set for Sunday, April 29, at the Vogeel Barn. It includes an arts and crafts competition, needlework competition and an arts and crafts sale.

All proceeds from the "Spring Thing" go to local charities.

THE ARTS AND CRAFTS competition is open to children 12 and under. The needlework contest is divided into two categories: ages 13 to 17 and ages 18 and over. Each article must be handmade. Prizes will go to the winners and all entries will be displayed on the day of the fair.

There is no charge for entering the competition. Mrs. Frank Simmons, 290-1408, and Mrs. Gerald McCullough, 358-6077, can be called for additional information.

Individuals or groups are invited to reserve a booth to sell original artwork, needlework and boutique items. A charge of $5 is made for each booth. Mrs. Matt Brown, 523-8930, or Mrs. R. L. Wu, 439-1828, should be called for reservations.

DAR will meet 'good citizens'

Eli Skinner Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will meet at 12:30 p.m. Thursday in the home of Mrs. Maurice A. Garland, 4448 Hoover St., Rolling Meadows. Co-hostesses will be Mrs. John A. Gustitus and Mrs. John Peters.

Members of Eli Skinner will be introduced to the DAR Good Citizen Girls selected from nine area high schools. These senior girls have won the DAR awards based on dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. Each girl will be a guest of the chapter at the state conference March 15-17 at the Drake Hotel in Chicago and will be eligible for awards at the state and national conventions.

A program on "Artifacts and Indian Lore" will be given by Mrs. Cathy Brightwell, who has made an intensive study of the culture and history of the American Indians. She will show jewelry, costumes, pottery, and headbands. "Indian artifacts are truly art treasures today," says Mrs. Brightwell, "because the artisans are dying off and the young are not interested in taking up the art." According to Mrs. Brightwell, "The Indian was more perfectly matched with nature than any man on earth... never taking more than he actually needed."

Eli Skinner will present Mrs. Brightwell with one of Daisy Daniels' autographed books on "Prairieville U.S.A."

Bridge tournament
Hoffman Estates Woman's Club will present a rubber bridge tournament. Thursday, Feb. 8 and 15 at Vogeel Barn at 8 p.m.

The two separate tournaments are offered at a cost of $2 for one night or $3 for two nights. A $50 first prize will be offered each night.

Registration should be made in advance to Mrs. Robert Oberle, chairman, 882-3873 or Mrs. Craig Scoble, 883-4292.

Scotch bowl Feb. 17

B'nai B'rith Aura Chapter will be holding a Scotch Bowl at Striker Lanes, Buffalo Grove, Feb. 17. The evening will include fun, food and prizes at a cost of $12.50 per couple.

Those wishing to make reservations may call Mrs. Ron Rosen, 541-0260.

More women are working but they're earning less

Women are working more and earning less these days, according to a report issued recently by the Continental Bank of Chicago.

Despite increasing numbers of women entering the nation's work force, they have gained little in improving their positions, and their wages have actually dropped in comparison to wages earned by men, the report said.

The growth of the female labor force is not a phenomenon to be associated strictly with the women's lib movement, but is a trend begun at the end of World War II. From 1950 to 1960, according to Continental's statistics, the female labor force increased 26 per cent, and 36 per cent from 1960 to 1970.

But, the report said, the types of positions women hold now are "little changed from what they were in the early 1960s. Nearly 75 per cent of all employed women are in occupations traditionally considered "women's work" — teachers, librarians, nurses, secretaries, waitresses, etc. Only 29 per cent of men hold these kinds of jobs.

"AT THE OTHER extreme," the report continued, "women account for less than one-fifth of all managers and administrators and only 3.5 per cent of all craftsmen and foremen, two of the highest paid occupational groups."

But paydays in 1973 was a lot better for women than it is now, even allowing for inflation. According to the report, the median wage for women working full-time in 1955 was 64 per cent of the median wage for men. In 1970, the female median wage was only 50 per cent of the male's.

The wage gap, as of 1970, was largest for female sales workers, who earned only 43 per cent of their male counterparts. In professional and technical fields, women earned 63.7 per cent of men's wages, and in clerical work they earned 64.7 per cent of men's incomes.

In terms of salaries, the Continental Bank found that 45 per cent of all women working full-time earned less than $5,000 in 1970, compared to 14 per cent of all males. But 42 per cent of all working women are without husbands (divorced, separated, widowed or single), and 6.2 million are heads of households, with 20 million persons dependent on them for sole support.

While 40 per cent of working men earn $10,000 or more, the report said, only 7 per cent of working women earn as much. Moreover, the report added, "there is substantial evidence that women who work full-time year round earn significantly less than men employed in similar jobs with the same amount of education."

WITH THE EXPANSION of the female work force have come significant changes in its composition. In the 1950s, a female worker was likely to be a young, single girl who would be employed only a short time. Today, however, the report noted, a working woman is more likely to be older, married, and a mother.

The employment rate for married women with children 6 to 17 years old has nearly doubled since 1948, and for women with children under 6 years old the rate has tripled, the report said.

But the greater proportion of working women still are single women, due in part to a trend toward later marriage. "The average age of first marriage for women has risen sharply," the report noted.

As for the future, official government projections indicate that the female labor force will increase only 17.6 per cent during this decade. But the estimated female labor force for 1975 has nearly reached already, indicating that the projection for 1980 may be conservative. Currently about 44.5 per cent of all adult females are employed.

Maybe you need home alarm system

by DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—For the homeowner whose property, furniture, art and other possessions call for more than elementary protection against burglary and fire, the electronic age offers an increasing number of options.

While the simple, inexpensive, common sense precautions probably make sense for most homeowners, those who feel the need of more sophisticated protection should consider an electronically-managed system combining up to three protective circuits — burglary, fire and panic, says Harold Ginsburg, president of Design Controls, Hempstead, N.Y., designer and manufacturer of alarm systems for leading distributors.

Every burglar alarm system basically is composed of a triggering device that detects the presence of an intruder, the actual alarm which warns occupants, local police and/or neighbors that there has been a break-in, he explains. The alarm also may scare off the intruder.

THE TRIGGERING devices themselves fall into two categories: perimeter devices which are magnetic switches placed on windows and doors that close an alarm circuit when the door or window is opened, thereby setting off the alarm; and electronic space sensors that detect the presence of an intruder in a room by use of body heat, ultrasonic waves or infrared projection.

"Placing a single door protection device on the front door is hardly enough," said Ginsburg. "There are so many other access points in a house that protecting one door has little or no value. All doors and windows accessible from the ground and/or hidden from street view should be protected, including basement entrances and garage doors."

The homeowner, he suggests, should select a system which allows setting and disconnecting the alarm only from various points inside the house, thereby eliminating the need for outside alarm keys. This, he said, minimizes the possibility of a burglary being able to disconnect the system from the outside.

Ginsburg said special attention should be given to any rooms containing valuables such as art and jewelry.

"THESE ROOMS," he said, "are favorite target areas of burglars and should contain alarm devices of their own. The stairway going to a bedroom area should contain secondary protection as well, to act as a trap in the event a burglar somehow gets past the outside protection."

The protection system also should contain "panic buttons" at selected points both in and outside the house, he recommends. These buttons, when touched, activate a shrill alarm which may frighten the intruder. Ginsburg said the FBI reports fewer than one in 41,000 intrusions continue after an alarm sounds.

On the other hand, he said, the system could provide for silent panic operation if it is connected to a nearby police department. Once the panic alarm is tripped, it should be resettable only at the master control panel. But make sure, Ginsburg cautions, that such buttons are placed out of the reach of small children.

A complete system, Ginsburg says, offers fire warning.

HEAT DETECTORS should be placed in all rooms except bathrooms, and in garage, attic and basement. In addition, smoke detectors should be installed at the head of each stairwell and in all hallways adjacent to each sleeping area.

A loud sounding device should be located close to all bedrooms and, if possible, at other points both inside and outside of the house. And make sure, Ginsburg advises, that the sound is a different one from that produced by the burglar alarm.

For the ultimate in home security, it is now possible in many communities — and advisable — to have the system connected to the local police. Check with local authorities to determine if they have an alarm panel or will permit an alarm company to install one. If not, ask if they will permit a pre-recorded, taped message announcing the burglary or fire. If so, have the alarm company make this connection.

Ginsburg suggested when considering an alarm company, the homeowner ask for a list of customers who can be checked for reference and satisfaction. It is a good idea, too, to check any firm you are considering with the local Better Business Bureau and the police department.

Theology series opens Feb. 7

Speakers for the spring session of the Northwest Area Ladies Theology Lecture and Discussion Series were announced by the steering committee this week. Speakers for the first three sessions and their topics are as follows:

Feb. 7 — Dr. Natalie Haimowitz, clinical psychologist, Director of Training of the Chicago Transactional Analysis Institute; "How our everyday transactions create personality roles."

Feb. 21 — Dr. Morris Haimowitz, social psychologist, Professor of Social Science at the Chicago City College; "Psychological Games Married People Play."

March 7 — Rev. John Shea, Chairman of Theology Dept., Niles College, Loyola University; "Religious Self-Understanding and Personal Life Style" — Part I.

Ladies Theology will meet at St. Paul of the Cross Catholic Church, Washington Street and Northwest Highway, Park Ridge, from 9:15 a.m. until 11:30 a.m.

Pre-registration will be $10 and registration at the door will be $12. This fee will include baby sitting for children two years and older. Coffee and rolls will be served.

To register readers may send name, address, telephone number and number of children for the nursery, with a check for $10 to: Mrs. Sylvia Emerick, 1438 Granville, Park Ridge, Ill., 60068.

Naim conference for newly widowed

St. Francis Chapter of Naim Conference will host an educational program for the newly widowed from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 15 N. Hickory, Arlington Heights.

Speakers will talk on legal and financial matters, the adjustments to widowhood and its spiritual aspects. Cake and coffee will be served and a question and answer period will follow.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

With chicken more than over one of the few economical buys, my daughter continues to try new recipes with it. Her feeling is that "cooking can be quite a bore, so why not try new things as often as you can?"

What this ingenious recipe calls for is a two and a half-pound chicken. She combines one-fourth teaspoon of paprika, one-eighth teaspoon sage and one-eighth teaspoon marjoram with one-third cup corn oil, blending this together well. With salt and pepper, she seasons the chicken and places it in a shallow baking pan. Brushed with the herb mixture, the chicken is broiled four inches from the heat for 12 minutes, turned over, basted with the herb mixture again and broiled 12 minutes longer.

The remaining herb mixture is mixed with one-half cup orange juice and poured over the chicken, which is then baked uncovered in a 350-degree oven for about 40 to 45 minutes — or until tender. She does taste it frequently. To me, the word is beautiful.

Dear Dorothy! The reader who has arthritis in her hands and who has found the key opener for sardine cans hard to manage may find my solution helpful — that is, if she has an electric can opener. My fingers get stiff during the winter and it was a relief to find that all the cans using keys (like sardines, anchovies, luncheon meats and so forth) will open perfectly with the electric opener. It's painless.

—Mrs. Gilbert Hazel.

Dear Dorothy: Readers are often asking you how to get stains off furniture. I got one off the other day by making a thin paste of salt and salad oil, putting it on the spot and letting it stand for a couple of hours. When wiped, the stain was gone.

I'm happy for you, but have to point out that this, as well as any other household remedy, will work only if there is a good finish on the wood. Also, nothing else should have been tried on the spot because this takes away part of the finish.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Padlock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Artists demonstrate own techniques

Two artists will demonstrate their individual techniques of painting and drawing when the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Community Arts League meets tomorrow, 8 p.m., in the Chamber of Commerce Recreation Center building in Wheeling's Chamber Park.

League president, Mrs. Richard Westgard, will demonstrate painting with acrylics. Using oil pastels on velour paper, Barbara Sharp will demonstrate her techniques in drawing. Although animals will be the basic subject matter, both artists will relate their techniques to other subjects.

Residents of Buffalo Grove, Mrs. Westgard and Mrs. Sharp have exhibited their work at the "Beep n' Brat" art fair in Wheeling and at other art fairs and shows held in the Chicago area.

Anyone interested in the creative arts is welcome to attend the meeting. Further information is available through the membership chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Kotzel, 537-3764.

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

A rapid heart rate can't be ignored

Dear Dr. Lamb — Could you please explain the difference between "fibrillation" and "tachycardia"? I have a leaky heart valve and a loud murmur but my doctor says it's all right. My blood pressure is normal and usually my heart rate is 80 per minute.

Three years ago I had an attack of fibrillation and my heart was 140 per minute. Then I had several mild attacks and last spring an attack with a heart rate of 160 per minute and my doctor said it was tachycardia and that's what I'd always had.

At the onset of the attacks I had many serious family problems and things haven't changed much. I've about decided tachycardia is more emotionally induced and that's why I'd like to know the difference between the two. I want to know whether my heart problem is solely physical or could be the result of worry.

Because I have many people dependent on me and much responsibility, I am worried for fear these attacks may signal something more significant and that I'll be unable to work and help those who depend on me.

Three years ago, before these attacks, I'd never been sick in my life and had always been active and alert. I am usually in pain with tension because of my personal affairs.

Dear Reader — Both fibrillation and atrial tachycardia are associated with rapid beating of the top part of the heart called the atria. In atrial tachycardia the heart rate is regular at rates over 100 per minute to about 250 beats per minute. In atrial fibrillation, the atria actually twitch or fibrillate at a rapid rate of approximately 500 times a minute.

When the atria are fibrillating rapidly or even beating rapidly with tachycardia, not all of the impulses are transmitted to the pumping part of the heart that causes the pulse.

This is particularly true of fibrillation and as a result, during fibrillation the heart rate is usually irregular. A person can have atrial fibrillation with the top of the heart beating slowly but irregularly. The more rapid the rate is, the more difficult it is sometimes to tell whether it's regular or not.

ATRIAL FIBRILLATION is more often associated with heart disease. Both can be caused by other conditions, for example, an overactive thyroid. Both can be precipitated by emotional exhaustion, particularly if accompanied with other problems in living habits.

Individuals who have underlying difficulties with known heart disease are influenced by emotional patterns which can aggravate their underlying condition.

Anyone who has recurrent rapid heart action whether it's tachycardia or fibrillation should avoid coffee, cigarettes, and alcohol as well as spicy foods or anything that they've learned upsets their digestion.

The only way to determine what's causing rapid heart action is by complete, careful medical examination. Your doctor should be able to answer these questions for you or be able to refer you to a heart specialist for more complete examination.

Human reproduction periled by use of common red dye?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A controversial red dye, used in everything from lipstick to soft drinks and pill coatings, is under attack from two fronts that contend it may represent a threat to human reproduction.

Consumer Reports Magazine, in its new issue, published a lengthy report on the substance — called Red Dye No. 2 — and recommended that it be banned until a complete study can be made.

The recommendations came as the Food and Drug Administration began reviewing a petition from the Health Research Group of Washington, a Ralph Nader-backed organization which asked the FDA to stop certifying the substance.

In both cases the critics cited studies which purported to show that animals fed the dye suffered impaired reproduction and increased infant mortality.

LAST JULY 4 the FDA proposed that limits be placed on the amount of dye in food products, and allowed a period of time for comment on the idea. That time period expired last September and a final decision has not been announced.

The FDA could offer no hint on when a decision might come.

The Health Research Group petition said "very recent" Russian tests showed that female animals fed the dye suffered increased fetal deaths, impaired milk production and a still born rate of one in seven; male animals, it added, suffered reduced life, movement and resistance to sperm.

THE DYE IS the most widely used food coloring in the nation. It shows up in soft drinks — such as cherry and strawberry — and gelatin desserts, candy, baked goods, chewing gum, ice cream and pet food.

Until the FDA acts, women, especially pregnant women, should be warned against using products which contain the dye, according to Sidney Wolfe, a physician associated with the Health Research Group. He wrote to Dr. Sprague Gardner, of Indiana University, president of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, asking him to urge members of the college to warn their patients against using food, drugs or cosmetics with the dye.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

A certain unlucky bridge expert of the thirties gave his name to a special coup. The coup consists of overtaking your partner's trick in order to make the wrong lead.

South ruffed the club opening and led a low spade toward dummy's nine. West put up the 10-spot but East knew better than to let his partner hold the trick. He rushed to play his ace so as to lead his singleton diamond.

If South had finessed, East would have ruffed the diamond return, but South was satisfied to make his redoubled contract. He rose with the ace; ruffed a spade in dummy; returned to his hand with a trump; ruffed his last spade; drew trumps and conceded a trick to the king of diamonds.

"Nicely played," complimented East. "If you'd finessed the diamond, you'd have been set."

"Blank, blank, blank, asterisk" grunted West. "He would have no play for the contract if you'd let me hold the spade."

West was right. He would have led a low club. South would have been forced to ruff. That would have left South with only three trumps. He could ruff out his spades if he wished to do so but he would not have been able to pull trumps and set up his diamonds. He would have gone down at least one trick and if he had been at all careless might well have gone down two or three.

This is where shoplifting stops being "fun."

If you've ever thought about doing a little shoplifting, think again.

Think how easy it is to get caught.

Think how it must feel to get caught.

Think how you'd answer the question that's on every job application, "Have you ever been arrested? If so, explain."

Think how—to the people you know, and the people you love, and yes, even to yourself—you can never be the same person again.

Think about it.

Commercial development subject of 5-hour discussion

by JILL BETTNER
Future commercial development in Buffalo Grove became the subject of a five-hour discussion Monday night at a public hearing on the proposed village master plan.

Road. Chuck Moodhe added that locating businesses on the fringes of the village would draw revenue from the surrounding areas as well as from local residents.

Gill opposes unit school district 'if it hurts us'

by WANDALYN RICE
Supt. Kenneth Gill of Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 has vowed he will stop

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 from forming a unit school district if it would result in financial harm to High School Dist. 214.

School caucus still accepting applications

The screening committee of the Dist. 21 General Caucus still is accepting applications for endorsement.

At a meeting of the Walt Whitman PTA in Wheeling Monday Gill said, "I'm damn well biased against a unit district under the present system," and added that he will oppose Dist. 59 if it tries to take more tax base than it takes students from Dist. 214.

WHITE PINE DITCH in Buffalo Grove has bank, on the left here, is steep and dangerous for children. Residents on the east bank complain about erosion, and residents all along the area complain that it is an eyesore. The village and the park district are currently involved in finding a solution to some, if not all of the problems.

Group to consider Kildeer School plan

The community relations committee formed to find a solution as to what should be done with Kildeer Countryside School in Dist. 96 will have its second public meeting at 8 tomorrow night at the school. Residents of the district are urged to attend.

The committee is considering what should be done with the school. The group is made up of nine residents and three members of the school board.

'Oklahoma' cast at Stevenson High

Major roles for the production of "Oklahoma" this spring at Adlai Stevenson High School have been announced by William Misk, director of the musical.

Jan Horvath, freshman, and Brad Owen, senior, will portray Laurie and Curly. Dennis Simpson was selected for the part of Jud.

Other cast members are Marsha Dush, Greg Frantz, Tracy Tobin, Lynn Sommerfield, Glen Wilgus, Pat Goodwin, Ray Cullen and Jim Lindgren.

Others are Chris Frantz, Andy Schnable, Laura LaPlaca, Amy Borgstrom, Lori Sturgeon, Ellen Breslau, Cindy Anderson, Bret Owen, Peter Schulenberg, Bill Holden, Mike Topel and Jack Maloney.

The musical will be presented April 27, 28 and 29 in the Stevenson auditorium.

Winter baseball sign-up tomorrow

Registration for a winter baseball batting program will begin tomorrow at the Wheeling Park District community building at Heritage Park.

With the help of an automatic pitching machine, baseball enthusiasts 18 years or younger will be able to work on their swings. Program instructor Gil Messor is a former freelance scout for three major league baseball teams and is a specialist in coaching hitting.

The program will begin Feb. 10 and continue for the next four Saturday mornings at Heritage Park. Instruction will begin at 9 a.m. and run for three hours. There is a $5 registration fee for the program.

Registration will continue at Heritage Park through Saturday and will be at Jack London Junior High School on Sunday.

Voter registration to close March 5

The county clerk's office has notified Wheeling officials that voter registration at the village hall will close for the upcoming April elections March 5.

It had formerly been announced that registration would close on Feb. 27 to allow for the township and the village elections.

Village Clerk Evelyn Diens said revised election laws probably accounted for the extended registration period. She said the county clerk is presently checking the legality of closing registration for village elections at the same time it closes for township elections.

Free-throw contest planned Saturday

The Wheeling Park District is sponsoring a free-throw basketball contest from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at Jack London Junior High School.

Four different age groups, ranging from 8 to 18 years, will compete. The top three throwers in each division will be given awards.

Paramedic promotion campaign begins

The Buffalo Grove firemen are putting posters and handouts in local businesses and public buildings to promote the suburban paramedic program.

Officially titled the "Mobile Intensive Care" network, the program has been in operation since Dec. 1 of last year. Since its inception the Buffalo Grove paramedics have responded to more than 20 trauma cases.

The new bright yellow posters explain the program in brief and give residents the telephone number they should use in case of emergency. It also contains a sketch showing the Northwest suburbs that are taking part in the program.

The yellow handouts also give a brief resume of the program and answer the 10 most asked questions in connection with the program.

Opponents in Strong Street battle await decision

by LYNN ASINOF
A News Analyst

Residents in the W. Strong Street area are waiting to learn whether they have the right to maintain the character of their present neighborhood. Developer Victor Smigel is waiting to see if he will be able to proceed with his plans to build apartments in the area.

Testimony in the week-long Strong Street area zoning case ended Monday, and the residents, Smigel and the Village of Wheeling now must wait for the judge to rule on the "reasonableness" of the village's decision to rezone 47 lots in the area for six-flat apartment buildings. That decision is expected Feb. 9.

During the course of the trial, the residents' attorney, John Burke, repeatedly tried to show that the residents have established a neighborhood that they do not want broken up by multi-family development.

TO PROVE that the village was unreasonable in its rezoning of the property, Burke argued that the multi-family development would decrease the value of neighboring single-family homes. Witnesses for the plaintiffs testified that the apartments would generate large numbers of school-aged children and create a traffic problem.

Burke charged that the present rezoning was spot zoning, which he said was illegal. He introduced evidence showing that the village's master plan called for high-density, single-family development in the area.

Attorneys representing the village, Smigel, and the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank said most of these arguments were irrelevant to the case. They said the only reason for the court to reverse the village zoning decision would be if the court found the decision to be totally unreasonable.

If the court upholds the zoning decision, the village would benefit in several ways. First, it would provide a way to bring water and sewer lines into the area at no expense to the village. This would allow the land to be developed, which in turn would produce revenue for the village through building permits, occupancy permits and higher real estate tax revenue.

ATTORNEY JACK SIEGEL, representing the village, argued that the fact that Smigel's development would bring water and sewer lines to the area was sufficient justification for the rezoning. He said the Strong Street area is presently unsuitable for any development unless water and sewer lines are brought in.

Siegel also disputed the contentions of the plaintiffs. He argued that the area is not predominantly a single-family neighborhood, but rather is 70 per cent vacant land. He offered this lack of development as proof that the land is unsuitable for single-family homes in its present condition.

Witnesses for the defense testified that while single-family development was theoretically possible, the expense of bringing utilities to the area would rule out this more costly form of development.

One defense witness even suggested that the present single-family homes in the area might be torn down and redeveloped for multi-family projects, thus eliminating the problem of mixing the two forms of development.

THE DEFENSE also presented witnesses who testified that fewer school-aged children would be generated by multi-family development than by single-family homes. They further stated that traffic produced by the apartments could be handled by the existing roads.

Siegel argued that previous Illinois zoning cases determined that zoning in an area could not be restrictive simply because the neighbors favored that zoning. He said the over-all benefit to the village outweighed the concerns of individual property owners.

The residents also contended that there were defects in the zoning hearings because objectors to the project were not given time to present testimony from their land planner. Further, they said, the zoning board had not followed the village zoning ordinance because the hearings showed no findings of fact.

Siegel argued that the residents were given the chance to have their expert testify before the village board when the trustees were considering the rezoning. He further stated that the village ordinance does not require specific fact finding on the part of the zoning board.

CITING several Illinois cases, Siegel contended that the court cannot challenge the thinking of the people who made the zoning decision. For this reason, it appears the plaintiffs did not challenge the reasons why the village chose to rezone this property.

Attorney John M. Daley, representing Smigel, argued that his client had invested substantial money in the project under the assumption that the village zoning was valid. Daley said this investment of more than $50,000 was sufficient to override the residents' objections to the development.

Despite the emotional appeal of the residents' charges, the judge must make his decision on the legal technicalities of the case.

Police, school, service officials meet

Youth needs, woes probed

More than 100 representatives of area police departments, school districts and youth service agencies attended a regional seminar Monday to seek improved methods of cooperation and coordination in dealing with youth needs and problems.

The seminar was sponsored by the Cook County Sheriff's Youth Services Division. It was held at the Schaumburg Park District's Meineke Community Center, 20 E. Weathersfield Way.

Before the group was divided into "workshop" discussion teams, Douglas Anderson, supervisor of the Community Resources Department of the Cook County Juvenile Court, outlined new procedures in juvenile jurisdiction recently instituted through the new Unified Code of Corrections.

Anderson said because of the new procedures, new avenues of rehabilitation are available for youthful offenders within their own communities. He said the existence and effectiveness of youth counseling and rehabilitation agencies can have great bearing on how a juvenile case is handled in the courts.

Anderson said, for example, if the court finds effective service agencies operating in the community of a youthful offender, he can be placed on probation — reporting to that agency — rather than being sent to the Audy Home. Anderson said during such a probation the judge can "continue" the case through the probation period, and the juvenile may avoid carrying a criminal record.

A similar rehabilitation system could work in the case of a juvenile convicted of a crime, he said. The youth could be paroled back to his home community, reported to a service agency or volunteer, and avoid several months of detention following trial.

Because of those procedures and several other changes in the unified code, Anderson said, communities can aid in providing better rehabilitation techniques, thereby addressing prevention of youth crime and problems rather than cure alone.

"We have the code. What we need now are unified agencies which will work in a coordinated effort," Anderson said. "That is the only way to convince the young we have a fair and adequate system and that we are truly interested in their welfare."

Following Anderson's remarks, the group was divided into four workshop discussions on the state juvenile law and its implications for "the interacting roles of youth-serving agencies."

DISCUSSION TOPICS for the afternoon workshop sessions included: "Involving youth in the creation and operation of youth programs," "The problems of youth in fast growing suburbs," and "alternatives to present state youth detention and rehabilitation centers."

James I. Gottreich, director of the sheriff's Youth Services Division, said the Northwest suburban area enjoys a substantial number of youth serving agencies. "What is needed now," he said, "is to get them all working together — to know what is available and to make use of them all."

The seminar Monday was for police, school, park and youth service representatives from Arlington Heights, Barrington, Hoffman Hills, Bartlett, Hanover Park, Barrington Estates, Inverness, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Roselle, Schaumburg, South Barrington and Streamwood.

It was the fifth such seminar in a series planned by the sheriff's department. Gottreich said a similar seminar for communities including Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Elk Grove Village is expected to be held sometime this month.

300 police chiefs at Towers

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood recently hosted a meeting of 300 police chiefs from around the state at a three-day convention at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

The semi-annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police featured a question and answer program with five member police chiefs and a team of law enforcement experts from the University of Illinois.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall was accepted into the association during the three-day session.

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson was named president of the association.

COMMITTEE discussions touched on a host of police problems including department administration, morale and police-community relations.

"We had a whole session on police administrative problems and there were a number of questions on this," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said. During the session the chiefs discussed the value of the new Arlington Heights-based Police Service Bureau, Case said.

The bureau is designed to provide assistance to chiefs in training, operational procedure, communications and other areas of administrative work.

"There were many good ideas presented as far as professionalization of police work," Case said. In a panel seminar sponsored by the Police Training Institute, Case said questions were shown on a screen followed by a discussion of the answers.

The panel discussion format was a new one which Case praised as being "very educational and worth while." He said the convention also included "a good display of equipment" being used in police work.

Gill opposes unit school district 'if it hurts us'

mentary and high schools are under separate school boards.

"I don't care what Dist. 59 does," Gill said. "I care them to try to form a unit district that would take that much assessed value from Dist. 214. If Dist. 214 doesn't take them to court, we will."

However, Gill added that if Dist. 59 proposed a unit district that would hurt Dist. 214 "that's fine with me. I'm tired of fooling around with those people. I think the move to a unit district down there is based on their parochialism and desire to go their own way."

In the remarks made in conjunction with a panel discussion on the subject of unit districts, Gill also attacked the assumption that unit school districts can improve the quality of education by providing a continuous program.

Gill said he worked in a downtown unit school district as an assistant superintendent and communication between elementary and high schools was worse there than it is under the dual school system in the Northwest suburbs.

"In that unit district, kindergarten and first grade kids didn't get any attention or money. It was the high schools, with their bands and football teams, that got everything. You'd be amazed at the fanaticism that built up. The only way I got a new junior high school was because they built a new high school and gave the younger kids the old one," he said.

GILL ALSO took a swipe at a proposal by Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher that a unit district be formed within the village limits of Schaumburg, removing that area from Elementary Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211. The proposal, he said, will only help Atcher in "becoming a pseudo-Mayor Daley."

Gill also said he will oppose any move to make High School Dist. 214 a unit district by absorbing all the feeder elementary school districts. The 214-student unit would have more than 50,000 students and, Gill said, "Any district that would go over 50,000 student population takes on all the characteristics of a centralized state with no communication with its people."

Gill admitted that under present Illinois law unit school districts are entitled to more state aid than dual districts, but said he believes that inequity will be ended either by legislation or by court decisions.

DEAN MACK, a representative of State School Supt. Michael Bakalla's office of school reorganization, another participant on the panel, cautioned Gill about being too confident of defeating a unit district try in Dist. 59.

Under the law, Mack said, persons who petition to have a unit district formed can go to court if their petition is denied by the county and state school superintendents. However, he said, the law does not provide for a judicial review for opponents of a unit district if a petition is approved and a referendum held.

Mack said the law is currently being challenged in a case involving the Bensenville schools, but added, "The way the law is written, dual districts are definitely vulnerable."

Federal budget cuts may affect water projects

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Federal budget cutbacks could hike the city's share of a massive proposed water system improvement project here by $800,000.

predicted as a maximum of $800,000. Behrel said he "will have to inquire" about the effect of Nixon's budget on financing of the project.

After the city obtains right-of-way agreements for pipeline construction and purchase of property for the pump station the "next step," according to Behrel, will be "a decision whether to purchase revenue bonds for $1.8 million or to seek federal money."

The cost difference to the city if HUD funds are cut off, is impossible to estimate because interest rates fluctuate, bond maturity dates vary and payments are determined by other programs, such as the $225,000 parking bond purchase.

IN ANOTHER development, the proposed project, prompted by low water pressure, malfunctioning storage tanks and other water circulation problems is a system that contains pipes installed before 1900, may also be slowed by a homeowners protest over proposed location of the pumping station on the former Kiwanis campground property at Woodland and Grove avenues.

The residents, members of the River-Rand Homeowners Association, spoke out against and helped block a February 1970 city council attempt to annex involuntarily the 11-acre Kiwanis site and allow 194 apartment units to be built there.

The filing deadline for city election nominating petitions has been changed to Feb. 13.

The local scene

Burglary reported

Burglars broke into the Carousel Quick Wash laundromat, 1363 Prospect Ave. early Monday and stole $178 from a change machine, according to Des Plaines police.

The burglars apparently used a key to open the change machine, police said.

Thieves loot auto

Thieves took a portable radio and other items valued at $300 from a car owned by James Wiedersberg of 129 Windsor Dr. Monday, according to Des Plaines police.

The trunk of the car had been pried open at Wiedersberg's home, and the items removed, police said.

Church to stage Mardi Gras night

Our Lady of Hope Church will stage a Mardi Gras Night Saturday Feb. 10 beginning at 8 p.m. in the school hall, 9701 W. Devon, Des Plaines.

There will be a grand raffle featuring an escape weekend at The Sheraton O'Hare Motor Hotel plus $200 cash and his and hers 5-speed Schwinn bikes. Mixed drinks and Italian beef sandwiches will be available.

Tickets will be sold at the door or advance reservations may be obtained by calling 292-3470, 298-6040 or 824-2076.

Softball meetings slated next week

The Des Plaines Park District will hold its first organizational meetings for the 1973 softball season next week. The 16-inch softball meeting is scheduled for Monday and the 12-inch fast pitch meeting will be Thursday. Both meetings will be at 7 p.m. in the park office, 748 Pearson St.

Anyone interested in having a team in either leagues should attend. For information, call 298-6106.

Miss Mehegan wins citizenship award

Estelle G. Mehegan, of 1637 Illinois St., will receive the Des Plaines Soroptimist club's youth citizenship award next month.

Miss Mehegan was named winner of the $100 award by Ald. Lois Czubakowski (5th), the Rev. James W. Jackson, pastor of Christ Church, and Sgt. Kenneth Fredericks of the police department.

She was judged on service, dependability, leadership and a "sense of purpose." City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach, chairman of the club's civic and public affairs committee, said.

Miss Mehegan is a member of the Maine West High School French club and student council. She was listed on the school's honor roll for three years and also is an 11th-year Girl Scout.

Last summer, she spent 10 weeks in Peru as a foreign exchange student.

The award will be presented at the club's Feb. 27 meeting.

First Church sermon topic Sunday: 'Love'

"Love" is the topic for the Sunday's lesson-sermon at First Church of Christ, Scientist in Des Plaines. Bible verses and correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook will be read.

Services are held at 11 a.m. in the church at Laurel and Marion streets. Sunday School welcomes young people up to 20. A nursery also is available. Wednesday evening testimony meetings are held at 8 p.m. All are welcome.

Vanguard corps dance Saturday

The Des Plaines Vanguard Drum and Bugle Corps Alumni Association will sponsor its first dance, Saturday, Feb. 17, at Local Lodge 1487 of The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, 50 W. Oakton St., Des Plaines.

Doors will open at 8 p.m. with a donation of $2 per person. There will be a live band and refreshments. Admission limited to those 21 years of age or older.

The Vanguard Alumni Association was formed in November of 1972. Members include graduates of the corps and their wives and husbands. For further information, contact Bill Agnello at 863-8750.

Behrel to ask token-fed parking meters

Mayor Herbert Behrel will recommend Monday that Des Plaines modify downtown parking meters to accept both coins and special tokens.

The change will cost the city an estimated $12,000 to $15,000, the mayor said yesterday at his weekly press conference. Council approval will lead to installation of parking meters in the new downtown Ellinwood Street parking lot.

"The only question is how much the token will be worth," the mayor said. "It could be five cents. Or it could be 10 cents. I may recommend that it's five cents."

Downtown merchants and city officials met Jan. 22 to determine a parking plan in an effort to compete with "free" lots at shopping centers. At the meeting, the merchants rejected Behrel's proposal to avoid meters and monitor the Ellinwood lot and supported the token proposal.

"We've finally gotten through to the merchants," the mayor said.

"THEY FINALLY realize that pennies are not coming back. The meter people don't even make penny meters anymore," he said. Des Plaines billed parking meter cost from five to 10 cents an hour in 1972, despite merchant protest.

The mayor described merchant reaction to the token proposal as "sort of a mutual agreement. In order to attract customers, the merchants have got to be part of the team."

Showing a handful of quarter size metal tokens, the mayor said that one and two-hour meters will be modified to accept tokens instead of quarters. The meters would continue to accept nickels and dimes. Cost of changing meter heads will vary between $2.65 and $4.25 each with an estimated total of $3,000.

THE CITY ALSO will purchase 118 new meters, costing about $6,000, for the Ellinwood lot.

The gold tokens, with "Des Plaines" stamped on one side, will cost about 3.3 cents each.

"We sell the tokens to the store. Then it's up to them," the mayor said.

The proposal should allow merchants to distribute the token "nickels" to customers as a method of "free" parking. Naperville and Melrose Park use the system, the mayor said. "Free parking in exchange for shopping in stores is good publicity," he said.

If approved Monday by the council, the change will hinge on "how fast the public works can work and the parts are available," Behrel said. "People are still getting free parking" in the Ellinwood lot.

The lot, opened in November to allow free Christmas parking, is expected to produce $30,000 a year in city revenue needed to finance recent purchase of $825,000 in parking revenue bonds.

Northwest Opportunity Center seeks $32,000 funds

Officials of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows are seeking $32,000 in contributions from local municipalities to help finance the center for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Letters have been sent to 14 area municipalities seeking permission for center officials to make a presentation to the governing board and request financial support.

The first presentation was made Monday to the Arlington Heights Village Board. The board agreed to contribute $4,800.

The municipal contributions are needed to offset the difference between the center's total operating budget of $130,000 and the projected $62,000 the center will receive from the federal government.

IN ADDITION TO the municipal contributions, the center must raise another $36,000 locally. Center officials hope to do this through their annual "Hike for Hunger," contributions from churches and other local organizations and a cash balance at the start of the new fiscal year on April 1.

The 1973-74 budget represents an increase of more than $35,000 over this year's budget. Bruce Newton, center director, explained the increase is necessary to finance a full-time employment person at the center, hire a third outreach worker and finance the Operation Nutrition program for seven months after federal funding is cut off.

Of the center's budget approximately $80,000 will be used for personnel and the remaining $50,000 for non-personnel expenses.

The center also hopes to establish a $15,000 contingency fund this year. This would be used if federal funds are cut off during the year to help phase out programs gradually or until programs could be taken over by other agencies, said Newton.

NEWTON EXPLAINED the $62,000 in federal funds will be allotted to the center by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity provided the money is there. President Richard M. Nixon in his budget message has stated he would like to phase out all OEO funding by July and make this a local responsibility to be taken care of through revenue sharing funds. The budget is now before Congress.

"We are really in a crisis position," said Newton.

Newton said if the federal funding is cut off the center would probably go to the six townships it serves and municipalities in those townships and ask them to make up the difference.

In determining how much to ask from each municipality the center divided the number of persons served by the center this year, more than 1,700 into $32,000. This came out to $19.06. The number of persons from each municipality was then computed and multiplied by $19.06.

THE FUNDING requests are: Arlington Heights, 241 persons, $4,593.46; Wheeling, 137 persons, $2,611.22; Barrington, 36 persons, $686.16; Palatine 274 persons, $5,222.44; Hanover Park, 58 persons, $1,105.48; Roselle, 26 persons, $495.56; Schaumburg, 25 persons, $478.50; Streamwood, 90 persons, $1,715.40; Des Plaines, 183 persons, $3,487.98; Hoffman Estates, 66 persons, $1,257.96; Rolling Meadows, 129 persons, $2,458.74; Elk Grove Village, 65 persons, $1,238.90; Prospect Heights, 14 persons, $268.84; Mount Prospect, 105 persons, $2,001.30 and other, 250 persons, $4,765.

Last year the center attempted to raise $25,000 from area municipalities served by the center. Arlington Heights and Hoffman Estates were the only villages to contribute directly but Palatine officials set up a fund for the center. Approximately $5,000 was contributed by municipalities last year.

Newton is optimistic that municipalities will be more responsive this year because of the additional funds they have received from revenue sharing and because federal funding for the center is in jeopardy.

Among the services the center offers are adult education, legal assistance, operation nutrition, emergency food, family planning, and income tax aid.

Purchase of some Kiwanis land, a former 11-acre campsite in unincorporated Cook County, could be hindered by Des Plaines recent water battle with property owners. Hidden in an Exchange National Bank trust, the owners announced plans for a 312-unit development under high density county zoning. The project hinged on Des Plaines providing water under a "third-party" agreement. The city refused water and the owners sued, losing Dec. 15, 1972 in the Illinois Appellate Court.

Foreign exchange teachers' view

Children in U.S. have 'more freedom'

by FRED GACA

There is more freedom for American children in school and at home than for their Mexican or Argentine counterparts, in the opinion of two foreign exchange teachers.

The two Latin American teachers have been observing the educational programs at Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 the past few weeks.

Eduardo Cardenas Larios of Mexico and Maria Mercedes A de Coronel of Argentina teach English as a foreign language in their native countries. They were selected to tour the United States as part of a group of more than 60 English language teachers from throughout the world. The tour, which began in August, was organized under the International Educational Development Program.

The six month tour was designed to give foreign English teachers an opportunity to be students and observers of the American educational process. Members of the tour attended the University of Texas and observed school systems in San Antonio, Houston, New Orleans, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Chicago.

CARDENAS AND Mrs. A de Coronel will be at Dist. 59 until Tuesday. They will then join other members of the group in Springfield. The tour will end in Mid-February with a visit to Washington, D.C.

In their native countries, Cardenas and Mrs. A de Coronel teach at what would be the equivalent of high school in America.

Comparing students in Mexico with those he has seen here, Cardenas said Mexican students, "listen to the teacher more carefully. They (Mexican students) are more respectful." He said American students, "are not disrespectful, but they have more freedom of action. They have a different attitude."

Mrs. A de Coronel said she thought American children, "grew up too fast, became too serious and too responsible. They don't seem as happy and gay as children in Argentina."

Cardenas said he did not think American children were more serious, but he said some younger children were afraid to talk to him because they did not understand the idea of someone coming from another country. "You just tell them you're a visitor from outer space and they they will talk with you," said Cardenas.

ONE THING that impressed the teachers about American education was the facilities available in the schools. "I don't know if students know how to appreciate all that is given to them. They seem to take it for granted, but the government and the teachers give them the best."

Both Cardenas and Mrs. A de Coronel said they thought they could teach in America. Mrs. A de Coronel said that teaching, like anything else, reflects the culture of the country. "Once you adjust to the culture of the country, then you can adjust to the teaching."

Both the foreign exchange teachers found it unique to have a school board, composed of parents, as head of the schools. They were amazed that parents

by BARRY SIGALE
The mobilization of outraged Roman Catholics — supported by protesters from every other denomination — has begun for Saturday's mass rally objecting to the Supreme Court's stand on abortion.
Using the pulpit to scold and cajole the high court on its recent decision to legalize abortion in the early stages of pregnancy, referred to by many as the "legalization of murder," Chicago and suburban priests have been urging their parishioners to publicly voice their objections to the ruling.
In what may become a bigger and more volatile issue than the church's controversial stand on divorce, the two sides have been clearly drawn.
ON THE ONE hand is the Supreme Court, buoyed by the vocal support of such pro-abortion reform organizations as the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecology and other medical groups as well as women's rights.
They argue that it may be in the best interests of the expectant mother to terminate her pregnancy in its early stages, that for either psychological or physical reasons the mother's fetus should not be allowed to become a human being.

On the other hand is the Catholic Church, supported by various "right to life" organizations and others, which claims abortion is not morally right, that the fetus has the same rights as any human being and that the mother has no right to destroy it.
THE CHICAGO Archdiocese of the Catholic Church is now supporting, and, indeed, encouraging its members, to join the march and rally Saturday. The demonstration is being planned by the Illinois Right to Life Committee, Illinois Citizens Concerned For Life and Birthright.
Activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. in front of the Federal Building at 219 S. Dearborn and culminates at the civic center. Among those expected to speak is John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago.
SINCE LAST week's statement by the Committee for Pro-Life Affairs of the National Council of Catholic Bishops that although the decision "may be legally permissible it is still morally wrong, and no court opinion can change the law of God prohibiting the taking of innocent human life." Several local priests have followed with the same theories.

Rev. Donald Duffy of St. Mary's Church in Buffalo Grove contrasted the Supreme Court's decision with President Nixon's peace achievements, both matters having a direct bearing on life.
He said it was "most difficult to reconcile two ways which follow back to back," one the truce in Vietnam, which meant that the killing of American servicemen would end, and the other the court's abortion ruling, which ignores the right to life.
"In its (the court's) decision, it said that it is illegal for the state to place any restrictions on mother during the first three months of her pregnancy. This decision rests in the hands of her and her physician. What about the right to life of the fetus? If we say nothing about the biological fact that there is life after conception do we make Gods out of physicians?"

Total library circulation dips by 4 pct.

Circulation of books and other materials at the Elk Grove Village Public Library dropped 4 per cent in 1972 compared to 1971, according to figures released yesterday by the library.

The total circulation includes adult and children's books, paintings, sculpture, films, records and tapes. Mary Clark, administrative librarian, said she could give no reason for the decline.

During 1972, the circulation of all adult materials increased by 2 per cent. However, circulation of all children's material fell 11 per cent, which resulted in the over-all 4 per cent drop.

MISS CLARK said the overall drop was especially hard to understand because the number of registered library cards has increased during 1972. According to the library's statistics, a total of 15,133 people had library cards by the end of 1972. This is a 12 per cent increase over the 13,323 cards registered in 1971.

Miss Clark said that the registration figure is a current one, all persons listed as having cards live in the village. She said the library uses the water department billing lists to keep track of residents who move out of the village. As soon as a person moves from the village, the library voids his registration form.

The total of 15,133 registered people represents 68 per cent of the village's population. Miss Clark called the 68 per cent "a nice figure, quite high." In 1971, 65 per cent of the village was registered.

Last year nine books were circulated per borrower. In 1971 the ratio was 11 books per borrower.

revised if a change is made in the use of motor fuel tax funds, Hugo Stark, Cook County superintendent of highways, said yesterday.

Money from the state motor fuel tax is rebated to the counties for use on roads. Yesterday in a "state of the state" speech, Gov. Daniel Walker supported the use of the rebates to finance mass transportation systems throughout the state after local resources were exhausted. Stark said the change could result in less money for highway construction.

Stark said yesterday his department was still working to secure rights-of-way for the project to widen Arlington Heights Road from the Salt Creek bridge to Devon Avenue. He said a dedication of land along Bluesterfield Road by the Elk Grove Park District also was needed before the bidding process could begin.

IN A PARK board meeting last Thursday, park commissioners donated a strip of land 33 feet wide from Wellington Avenue west for 500 feet for the project. The land was dedicated to Elk Grove Village.

Stark has said the county highway department was planning to widen Arlington Heights Road to four lanes with a median strip. Bluesterfield Road and Devon Avenue also will be widened near their Arlington Heights Road intersections.

Stark said the project will take about a year to complete, but the work will be done in stages during two construction seasons.

According to a village plan to handle traffic during construction, nontruck traffic would be detoured away from Arlington Heights Road by way of Elk Grove and Kennedy boulevards. Truck traffic will be detoured by way of Landmeier and Tonne roads during the project.

THERE HAS BEEN some discussion of eventually widening the entire length of Bluesterfield Road to four lanes from Arlington Heights Road to the bridge over Interstate 90.

Elk Grove Village Mgr. Charles Willis said this week the village has talked to the county about the possibility of widening the roadway on numerous occasions. However he said he did not think the Bluesterfield project could be coupled with Arlington Heights Road because plans for the Arlington Heights Road project already had been finalized.

NW Opportunity Center seeks $32,000

Officials of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows are seeking $32,000 in contributions from local municipalities to help finance the center for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Letters have been sent to 14 area municipalities seeking permission for center officials to make a presentation to the governing board and request financial support.

The first presentation was made Monday to the Arlington Heights Village Board. The board agreed to contribute $4,600.

The municipal contributions are needed to offset the difference between the center's total operating budget of $130,000 and the projected $62,000 the center will receive from the federal government.

IN ADDITION TO the municipal contributions, the center must raise another $36,000 locally. Center officials hope to do this through their annual "Hike for Hunger," contributions from churches and other local organizations and a cash balance at the start of the new fiscal year on April 1.

The nation

Veteran astronaut Thomas Stafford, hardluck Mercury pioneer Donald Slayton, and rookie Lance Brand were named to fly the earth orbital rendezvous and linkup with the Russians in 1975.

President Nixon predicts 1973 "can be a great year" for the economy if Congress cooperates to hold the line on federal spending.

Doctors who treated former President Lyndon Johnson for heart ailments said they decided against coronary bypass surgery because of extensive heart damage and a diseased colon.

Guilty verdicts were returned against two former officials of President Nixon's re-election campaign on charges arising from the break-in and bugging last June at Democratic Party headquarters. Convicted were G. Gordon Liddy and James W. McCord Jr.

Treasury Secretary George Schultz defended the President's budget cuts saying: "You've got to have guts" to stop programs that don't work.

The state

Gov. Daniel Walker's "state of the state" message was interrupted 14 times by applause yesterday. (Turn to page 2.)

Three young black men were found slain — bound and shot in the back of the head — in a padlocked Old Town apartment in Chicago.

An Internal Revenue Service agent testified former Illinois Gov. Otto Kerner at first denied the "Chicago Co." — listed on his 1967 income tax return — was a racetrack corporation.

The world

In the first air incident since Jan. 8, Syrian fighter planes intercepted Israeli warplanes flying a mission over Syria, and chased them into Lebanese airspace.

The Irish Republican Army said it shot a Protestant gunman in the head because he was involved in the murder of a 14-year-old Catholic boy.

Opportunity Center seeks $32,000

reach worker and finance the Operation Nutrition program for seven months after federal funding is cut off.

Of the center's budget approximately $30,000 will be used for personnel and the remaining $30,000 for non-personnel expenses.

The center also hopes to establish a $15,000 contingency fund this year. This would be used if federal funds are cut off during the year to help phase out programs gradually or until programs could be taken over by other agencies, said Newton.

NEWTON EXPLAINED the $62,000 in federal funds will be allotted to the center by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity provided the money is there. President Richard M. Nixon in his budget message has stated he would like to phase out all OEO funding by July and make this a local responsibility to be taken care of through revenue sharing funds. The budget is now before Congress.

"We are really in a crisis position," said Newton.

Newton said if the federal funding is cut off the center would probably go to the six townships it serves and municipalities in those townships and ask them to make up the difference.

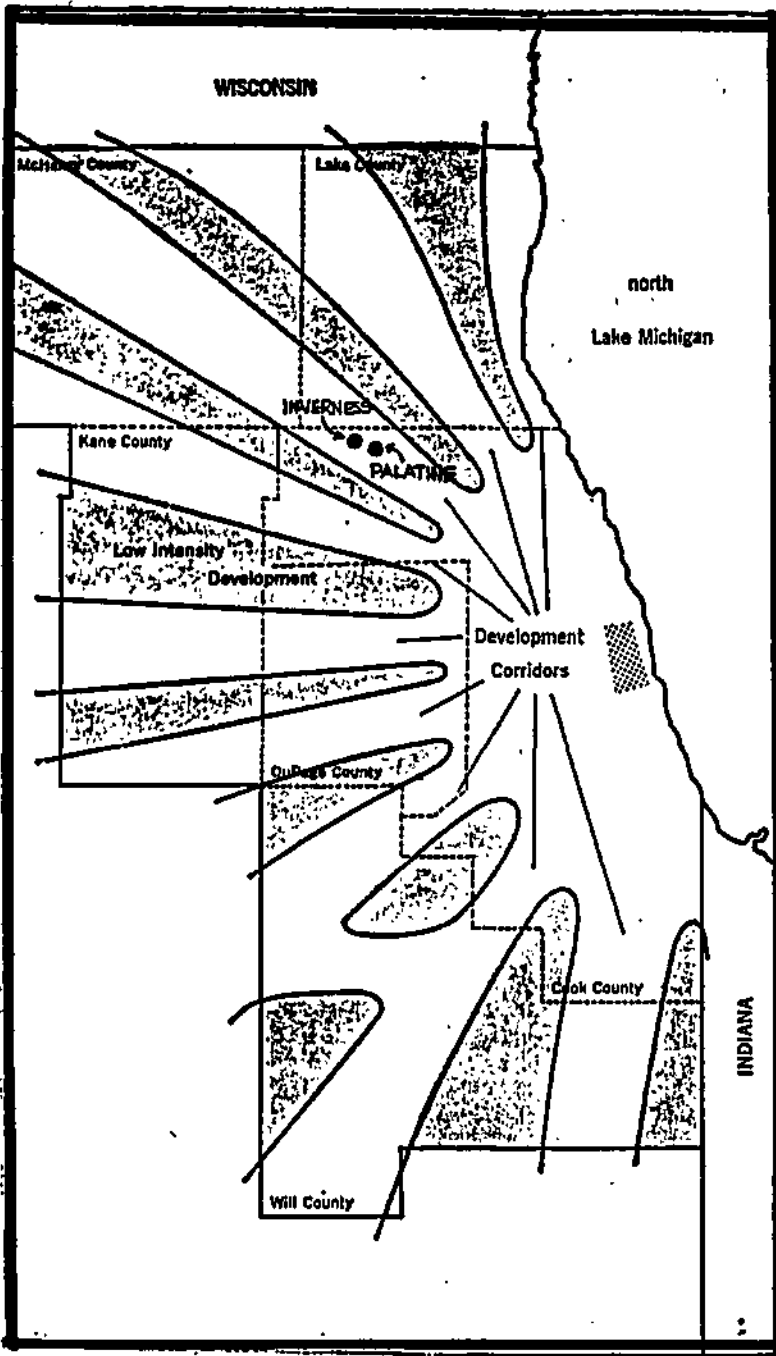

In determining how much to ask from each municipality the center divided the number of persons served by the center this year, more than 1,700 into $32,000. This came out to $19.06. The number of persons from each municipality was then computed and multiplied by $19.06.

THE FUNDING requests are: Arlington Heights, 241 persons, $4,593.46; Wheeling, 137 persons, $2,611.22; Barrington, 36 persons, $686.16; Palatine 274 persons, $5,222.44; Hanover Park, 58 persons, $1,103.48; Roselle, 26 persons, $493.56; Schaumburg, 25 persons, $476.50; Streamwood, 90 persons, $1,715.40; Des Plaines, 183 persons, $3,487.98; Hoffman Estates, 60 persons, $1,147.96; Rolling Meadows, 129 persons, $2,458.74; Elk Grove Village, 65 persons, $1,238.90; Prospect Heights, 14 persons, $268.84; Mount Prospect, 105 persons, $2,001.30 and other, 250 persons, $4,765.

Last year the center attempted to raise $25,000 from area municipalities served by the center. Arlington Heights and Hoffman Estates were the only villages to contribute directly but Palatine officials set up a fund for the center. Approximately $5,000 was contributed by municipalities last year.

Newton is optimistic that municipalities will be more responsive this year because of the additional funds they have received from revenue sharing and because federal funding for the center is in jeopardy.

Among the services the center offers are adult education, legal assistance, operation nutrition, emergency food, family planning and income tax aid.

INVERNESS MAY BE too near the Chicago and North Western Ry tracks for its own good. This illustration of the NIPC corridor system places a large portion of the village within a lane recommended for higher-density construction. Called the Finger Plan, development would follow nine "fingers" radiating from the palm of densely populated Chicago areas.

They were selected to tour the United States as part of a group of more than 60 English language teachers from throughout the world. The tour, which began in August, was organized under the International Educational Development Program.

The six month tour was designed to give foreign English teachers an opportunity to be students and observers of the American educational process. Members of the tour attended the University of Texas and observed school systems in San Antonio, Houston, New Orleans, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Chicago.

CARDENAS AND Mrs. A de Coronel will be at Dist. 59 until Tuesday. They will then join other members of the group in Springfield. The tour will end in Mid-February with a visit to Washington, D.C.

In their native countries, Cardenas and Mrs. A de Coronel teach at what would be the equivalent of high school in America.

Comparing students in Mexico with those he has seen here, Cardenas said Mexican students, "listen to the teacher more respectfully. They (Mexican students) are more respectful." He said American students, "are not disrespectful, but they have more freedom of action. They have a different attitude."

Mrs. A de Coronel said she thought American children, "grow up too fast, become too serious and too responsible. They don't seem as happy and gay as children in Argentina."

Both the foreign exchange teachers found it unique to have a school board, composed of parents, as head of the schools. They were amazed that parents have so much power in the American education system.

During the tour, the teachers were housed with private families to give them a chance to observe American family life.

Cardenas said he found American parents, "give more freedom to the children. The children are not disrespectful, but they have more freedom to investigate. In Mexico, children are more dependent on the family."

Mrs. A de Coronel said that in Argentina, "we are more economically and emotionally dependent on our parents. We never break the link with our parents."

AFTER BEING on the tour, Cardenas said some of the misconceptions he had about the United States were cleared up. "I thought people here were very cold. I thought everything was mechanical, with huge machines and computers doing everything. If you wanted something, all you had to do was press a button."

Mrs. A de Coronel said she was "quite thankful for the people in charge of the program and the warm welcome we have received. We feel at home here. I didn't think I would feel so at home."

Village 'too close to tracks'

Inverness feeling effects of steady suburban growth

by JULIA BAUER

(A News Analysis)

Inverness, the village of spacious estates for the wealthy, is feeling the crunch of taking root too near a commuter railroad.

Rapid population growth, particularly in and around Palatine Township, is infringing on the rolling countryside of the village. As a result, Inverness trustees adopted their infant comprehensive plan this month to stall higher-density development near the village.

But some residents apparently feel even that plan is too liberal.

What may be the real problem is Inverness' proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. The Finger Plan, a 1967 proposal adopted by the North-eastern Illinois Planning Commission, predicted the growth of Chicago's suburbs along commuter rail lines.

CALLED corridors, land within 1½ miles on either side of a commuter train or expressway system was pinpointed for higher-density development, such as apartments, townhouses or small lot single-family homes. Between these "fingers" of development, the original plan urged that land be purchased for parks, low density housing, or forest preserves to prevent the entire region from being overdeveloped.

Inverness is experiencing a slightly different twist in the corridor concept. That portion of the village within the Chicago and North Western Ry. 10 minutes' drive from the nearest train station, was already developed at a very low density. Homes in this northern segment of Inverness were built on one to five acres of land each. But the undeveloped portion of the village, which is also most susceptible to high density housing, lies in the area recommended for open space.

In reality, the NIPC corridor system has had little direct effect on land in or out of the imaginary fingers in the Finger Plan. Local governments have control of zoning within their boundaries, and according to land planner Robert B. Teska, most local agencies are not adhering to the plan.

Teska authored the master plan for Inverness by Barton Aschman Associates, the firm that also helped write the Finger Plan.

THE CHICAGO and North Western Ry. and the Milwaukee Road Ry. form the two corridors nearest Inverness. The basic intent of the NIPC plan was to steer commuters toward using the public transportation by concentrating construction along railways rather than highways.

A review of the Finger Plan, particularly as it affects the Barrington area, is scheduled by NIPC for sometime in the coming two weeks. In the meantime, a Feb. 6 public hearing will involve Inverness residents as they look over their own recently-approved comprehensive plan. That plan as it stands now recommends the first development within the village on less than one acre per home.

The highest density allowed in the plan is two to six units per acre. Other small portions would have one to two units per acre, and the rest of the village would remain at its one unit or less per acre standard.

One reason the density has to stay relatively low is the poor soil for Inverness' septic system. Unless the village joins the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) for its sewers, Teska said the land couldn't support development at much more than one unit per acre.

BUT THE REASON Inverness is likely to become landlocked by other homes, townhouses and apartments shows up in NIPC's population projections released a few months ago.

Palatine Township, which includes Palatine, Inverness, Rolling Meadows, unincorporated areas and portions of neighboring villages, currently has 55,000 people. In two years, NIPC projects that the township will total 68,000.

And by 1995, the township's population will more than double its current size. If such a boom becomes a reality, Inverness, the "village with a heritage," is likely to find itself a tiny outpost of country homes in an urban environment.

Single-family home plan studied

The Elk Grove Village Plan Commission is studying plans submitted by Centex Homes Inc. to subdivide two sections of land in its development west of Ill. Rte. 53 for single-family homes.

Village Building Comr. Tom Reitenbach said yesterday the plans coincided with the company's previous announcement for the land, commonly known as the Vale Tract.

"The plans call for the conventional single-family development like they (Centex) already have in the area," he said.

One section submitted for village approval is located near the southeast corner of Nerge and Meacham roads and would contain 146 lots. The other section, consisting of 121 homes, is just west of Rte. 53 from Devon Avenue to north of Nerge Road.

In all the Vale Tract includes 1,096 acres. One section of single-family houses has been completed, and another is under construction.

Altogether the developers have proposed 6,821 living units in the project. This includes 1,601 single-family homes, 1,088 cluster units, 1,167 townhouses and quadromiums, 1,460 garden apartments and 1,505 apartments.

Density of the project ranges from 3.5 units per acre in the single-family sections to 35 units per acre for the apartment buildings.

by WANDALYN RICE

Supt. Kenneth Gill of Wheeling-Willamette Grove Dist. 21 has vowed he will stop Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 from forming a unit school district if it would result in financial harm to High School Dist. 214.

At a meeting of the Walt Whitman PTA in Wheeling Monday Gill said, "I'm damn well biased against a unit district under the present system," and added that he will oppose Dist. 59 if it tries to take more tax base than it takes students from Dist. 214.

Dist. 59 is now in the midst of a feasibility study on forming a unit district, which would combine all elementary and high schools under a single school board in that area.

Preliminary figures have indicated that a unit district composed of all of Dist. 59 and including Elk Grove and Forest View high schools from Dist. 214 would take about 28 per cent of the students from Dist. 214 and would also take about 37 per cent of the tax base.

AREA SCHOOL districts now are organized as "dual districts," and the elementary and high schools are under separate school boards.

"I don't care what Dist. 59 does," Gill said. "I dare them to try to form a unit district that would take that much assessed value from Dist. 214. If Dist. 214 doesn't take them to court, we will."

However, Gill added that if Dist. 59 proposed a unit district that would not hurt Dist. 214 "that's fine with me. I'm tired of fooling around with those people. I think the move to a unit district down there is based on their parochialism and desire to go their own way."

In the remarks made in conjunction with a panel discussion on the subject of unit districts, Gill also attacked the assumption that unit school districts can improve the quality of education by providing a continuous program.

Gill said he worked in a downstate unit school district as an assistant superintendent and communication between elementary and high schools was worse there than it is under the dual school system in the Northwest suburbs.

"In that unit district, kindergarten and first grade kids didn't get any attention or money. It was the high schools, with their bands and football teams, that got everything. You'd be amazed at the fanaticism that built up. The only way I got a new junior high school was because they built a new high school and gave the younger kids the old one," he said.

GILL ALSO took a swipe at a proposal by Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher that a unit district be formed within the village limits of Schaumburg, removing that area from Elementary Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211. The proposal, he said, will only help Atcher in "becoming a pseudo-Mayor Daley."

Gill also said he will oppose any move to make High School Dist. 214 a unit district by absorbing all the feeder elementary school districts. The 214-wide unit would have more than 50,000 students and, Gill said, "Any district that would go over 50,000 student population takes on all the characteristics of a centralized state with no communication with its people."

Gill admitted that under present Illinois law unit school districts are entitled to more state aid than dual districts, but said he believes that inequality will be ended either by legislation or by court decisions.

DEAN MACK, a representative of State School Supt. Michael Bakalis's office of school reorganization, another participant on the panel, cautioned Gill about being too confident of defeating a unit district try in Dist. 59.

Under the law, Mack said, persons who petition to have a unit district formed can go to court if their petition is denied by the county and state school superintendents. However, he said, the law does not provide for a judicial review for opponents of a unit district if a petition is approved and a referendum held.

Mack said the law is currently being challenged in a case involving the Bensenville schools, but added, "The way the law is written, dual districts are definitely vulnerable."

Inverness under glass

Posh community of spacious estates feeling the effects of encroaching suburbia

by JULIA BAUER
(A News Analysis)
Inverness, the village of spacious estates for the wealthy, is feeling the crunch of taking root too near a commuter railroad.

apartments, townhouses or small lot single-family homes. Between these "fingers" of development, the original plan urged that land be purchased for parks, low density housing, or forest preserves to prevent the entire region from being overdeveloped.

Teska authored the master plan for Inverness by Barton Aschman Associates, the firm that also helped write the Finger Plan.

acre, and the rest of the village would remain at its one unit or less per acre standard.
One reason the density has to stay relatively low is the poor soil for Inverness' septic system. Unless the village joins the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) for its sewers, Teska said the land couldn't support development at much more than one unit per acre.

BUT THE REASON Inverness is likely to become landlocked by other homes, townhouses and apartments shows up in NIPCC's population projections released a few months ago.

NW Opportunity Center seeks $32,000

300 police chiefs gather at Towers

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood recently hosted a meeting of 300 police chiefs from around the state at a three-day convention at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

The semi-annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police featured a question and answer program with five member police chiefs and a team of law enforcement experts from the University of Illinois.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall was accepted into the association during the three-day session.

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson was named president of the association.

COMMITTEE discussions touched on a host of police problems including department administration, morale and police-community relations.

"We had a whole session on police administrative problems and there were a number of questions on this," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said. During the session the chiefs discussed the value of the new Arlington Heights-based Police Service Bureau, Case said.

The bureau is designed to provide assistance to chiefs in training, operational procedure, communications and other areas of administrative work.

"There were many good ideas presented as far as professionalization of police work," Case said. In a panel seminar sponsored by the Police Training Institute, Case said questions were shown on a screen followed by a discussion of the answers.

The panel discussion format was a new one which Case praised as being "very educational and worth while." He said the convention also included "a good display of equipment" being used in police work.

RELAX, JOHN PETRIKAS, that's all you need to remember to learn how to back float. For 5-year-old John, however, that advice is sound only as long as instructor Jody Unruh keeps a "Security" hold. Floating is the first step to swimming, according to the Red Cross method followed in the Salt Creek Park District's learn-to-swim classes. John is one of a number of children currently enrolled in one of three swimming sessions offered throughout the year. (Another photo on Page 3.)

THE FIRST THING to remember when you're learning to swim is to follow instructions, as these youngsters are learning from Jody Unruh, swimming instructor for the Salt Creek Park District. The district is offering learn to swim classes through March 17 at the Arlington Park Towers pool.

Settlement drawing near for Howie-In-The Hills area

The elements for settlement of the Howie-In-The-Hills lawsuits involving the Village of Hoffman Estates appear to be taking shape, according to comments made yesterday by attorneys handling negotiations.

"We're very close to settlement" with the Teamsters Union Pension Fund, said Steve Bashwiner. He is attorney for the federal receivership now holding title to the land pending a sale to Meridian Investment and Development Co. "I believe we've just about agreed on the terms of settlement," said Bashwiner.

Final negotiations with another party to the case, a group of persons who bought bonds to finance public improvements in the Howie site, have not yet begun, said Bashwiner. He foresees no difficulties or complications in reaching a compromise with the bondholders.

Bashwiner said it appears the settlement now will depend on the village, and its willingness to grant zoning desired by Meridian.

"I WOULD suspect in March or April they (the village plan commission and village board) could hold hearings" on zoning, said Bashwiner. The village has promised full disclosure of the plan for development of the 497-acre site and ample opportunity for public comment on the plan before a decision on zoning is rendered. The site is north of the Winston Knolls subdivision, along both sides of Palatine Road.

Bashwiner said the terms of the settlement will be revealed when it is approved by the federal courts supervising the receivership.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert indicated yesterday he had not met with Bashwiner since Jan. 15, when the second and last negotiating meeting between the village board and representatives of Meridian was held. More negotiating sessions will be scheduled in the near future, Hofert predicted. In the meeting with Bashwiner, said Hofert, terms of the settlements with the Teamsters Union and the bondholders were discussed.

The Howie site has been in receivership since 1964, when the former title holder, City Savings Association of Chicago, went bankrupt.

THE BONDS were to finance installation of sewers, water mains and other public improvements at the site, as was a loan from the Teamsters Union. The improvements already had been installed.

Seek cool reception for speed skating

Palatine Park District officials are trying again to hold the speed skating competition for youths age 6 through 15.

The event was canceled last week because warm weather had melted all ice in the park district rinks. Sponsored jointly by the Palatine Jayces and the park district, the races will start at 10 a.m. Saturday, weather permitting. Registration is at 9:30 a.m.

Park district residents should call the park administration office, 359-0333, Friday to be sure the rinks will be open for the Saturday races.

Winners will compete in the North Regional Jaycee Speed Skating Tournament in Rolling Meadows on March 3. If Saturday is unsuitable for the preliminary races, the event will be rescheduled for Feb. 10 at the Community Park rink, 262 E. Palatine Rd.

Train death victim's inquest postponed

The inquest into the death of Edward H. Shannon, Palatine, who was struck by a train Sunday night, yesterday was postponed to Feb. 26.

The 57-year-old victim, of 1510 N. Northwest Hwy., was hit by a northwest bound Chicago and North Western Ry. train that was pulling out of the Irving Park station. He was pronounced dead at Belmont Hospital in Chicago.

Planners OK condo project, ask park district donation

The Palatine Plan Commission last night voted its approval of a 42-unit condominium project next to park district property, but with the stipulation that the developers make a contribution to the park district.

The plan commission, after more than 2½ hours of discussion of the project, known as Cobblestone Court, voted unanimously to recommend that the village board grant the rezoning request.

The recommendation is contingent on an agreement being reached between the developers, Bernard J. Clark and Assoc., Skokie, and the Palatine Park District that would allow the developers to use the park district access road from Northwest Highway.

The motion made no mention of other items that have held up negotiations between the two groups.

SPECIFICALLY, the park district had asked for the improvement of the four-acre lake on Palatine Hills Golf Course to prevent flooding, and for construction of one or two tennis courts.

The park district may use these requests as bargaining points for allowing the developers to use the golf course access road which is privately owned by the park district.

The developers had indicated a willingness to improve the road and, in addition, to make a $200-per-unit cash contribution to the park district, or a cash total of $8,400.

Park District Dir. Fred P. Hall estimated the cost of improving the lake and building one tennis court at $28,000 to $30,000.

The park district's current requests are considerably lower than the earlier estimates because the district is no longer asking that the entire 4-acre lake be dredged, and has reduced the number of tennis courts from two to one.

One lone plan commissioner Bryan P. Coughlin, Jr., was against approving the project because the developers and park district had not reached an agreement. However, he left before the vote was taken.

No controversy in vote

New city ward boundaries get unanimous council OK

The controversy that has surrounded the redistricting of wards in Rolling Meadows was noticeably absent last night as city aldermen unanimously approved a new ward map for the city.

Wuerch's (1st) motion to waive a first reading of the ordinance.

city rather than on the basis of population.

Northwest Opportunity Center seeks $32,000 funds

Officials of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows are seeking $32,000 in contributions from local municipalities to help finance the center for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

during the year to help phase out programs gradually or until programs could be taken over by other agencies, said Newton.

THE MAP approved last night does not substantially change the city's original ward boundaries. Using an estimate of four persons living per home in the city, the redistricting committee has said the wards contain: 3,750 in Ward 1; 3,840 in Ward 2; 3,856 in Ward 3; 3,818 in Ward 4, and 3,914 persons in Ward 5.

Letters have been sent to 14 area municipalities seeking permission for center officials to make a presentation to the governing board and request financial support.

NEWTON EXPLAINED the $32,000 in federal funds will be allotted to the center by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity provided the money is there. President Richard M. Nixon in his budget message has stated he would like to phase out all OEO funding by July and make this a local responsibility to be taken care of through revenue sharing funds. The budget is now before Congress.

However, Michael Lavell, consulting attorney for the Cook County Election Department, said Friday the ruling means the disparity between each ward cannot vary by more than one per cent.

The first presentation was made Monday to the Arlington Heights Village Board. The board agreed to contribute $4,600.

"We are really in a crisis position," said Newton.

Only minor questions were discussed by aldermen before a vote was taken on the new boundaries. They included a question by Ald. Thomas Scanlan (1st), on a clarification of Ward 1 boundaries, a question from Ald. John Rock (3rd) on the definition of boundaries between Wards 3 and 4, and a question from Ald. Ken Retzke (5th) on the legal description of the fifth ward's southern boundary.

The municipal contributions are needed to offset the difference between the center's total operating budget of $130,000 and the projected $98,000 the center will receive from the federal government.

In determining how much to ask from each municipality the center divided the number of persons served by the center this year, more than 1,700 into $32,000. This came out to $19.06. The number of persons from each municipality was then computed and multiplied by $19.06.

THE BOUNDARIES need only city council approval for adoption. Court review of the boundaries is not done unless a lawsuit contesting the boundaries is filed in federal court.

IN ADDITION TO the municipal contributions, the center must raise another $36,000 locally. Center officials hope to do this through their annual "rise for Hunger" contributions from churches and other local organizations and a cash balance at the start of the new fiscal year on April 1.

THE FUNDING requests are: Arlington Heights, 241 persons, $4,593.46; Wheeling, 137 persons, $2,611.22; Barrington, 36 persons, $688.16; Palatine 274 persons, $5,222.44; Hanover Park, 58 persons, $1,105.48; Roselle, 28 persons, $495.68; Schaumburg, 25 persons, $476.50; Streamwood, 90 persons, $1,715.40; Des Plaines, 193 persons, $3,687.90; Hoffman Estates, 68 persons, $1,287.96; Rolling Meadows, 129 persons, $2,458.74; Elk Grove Village, 65 persons, $1,238.90; Prospect Heights, 14 persons, $266.84; Mount Prospect, 185 persons, $3,501.30 and other, 250 persons, $4,765.

Deadline for approval of a new ward map had been Feb. 16, in order to prepare for the April 17 election. Members of the redistricting committee were the five aldermen whose terms expired this year. They are: Wuerch, Ald. Thomas Scanlan (1st), Ald. John Rock (3rd), Ald. Ken Retzke (5th), Ald. Daniel Weber (4th), and Ald. Fred Jacobson (5th).

RELAX, JOHN PETRIKAS, that's all you need to remember to learn how to back float. For 5-year-old John, however, that advice is sound only as long as instructor Jody Unruh keeps a "Security" hold. Floating is the first step to swimming, according to the Red Cross method

Inverness feeling growth

by JULIA BAUER (A News Analyst)
Inverness, the village of spacious estates for the wealthy, is feeling the crunch of taking root too near a commuter railroad.

But some residents apparently feel even that plan is too liberal. What may be the real problem is Inverness' proximity to the Chicago and North Western Ry. The Finger Plan, a 1967 proposal adopted by the Northwestern Illinois Planning Commission, predicted the growth of Chicago's suburbs along commuter rail lines.

or expressway system was pinpointed for higher-density development, such as apartments, townhouses or small lot single-family homes. Between these "fingers" of development, the original plan urged that land be purchased for parks, low density housing, or forest preserves to prevent the entire region from being overdeveloped.

Park tax control legal filing ends

Salt Creek Park District officials today will file their last brief in a legal dispute with the Rolling Meadows Park District concerning taxing control of a $6.9 million assessed industrial park.

The brief is part of a series of pretrial actions begun last January by the Salt Creek district to win from the city park district taxing control of the valuable 6.5-acre industrial park. The park is located on Northwing Road northwest of Arlington Park Race Track in Rolling Meadows.

Salt Creek officials charge in the suit that the industrial park was illegally annexed to the city park district in 1959.

SALT CREEK attorney Michael Stronberg said yesterday "the brief will be filed on time," or by the Jan. 31 deadline set by the court. The brief was scheduled to be filed several months ago in answer to a statement filed by the city park district, but several continuances were granted to allow for the late filing.

Once the brief is filed, the city park district will have until the end of February to file its answer. That action should end the pretrial round of the litigation, according to Stronberg. A hearing to decide the dispute will then probably take place in March, he has said.

Salt Creek Park Director Jim DeVos said yesterday the brief will probably detail his district's argument that the industrial park has not been improved in any way while under the Rolling Meadows district's jurisdiction. The brief will point out that taxing revenue from the industrial park has been taken while little or no services have been provided to the area in return.

AS PART OF the taxable area encompassed by the Rolling Meadows Park District, the industrial park has been taxed at a rate of 43 cents per $100 assessed valuation. If control of the area should be awarded to Salt Creek, the area's taxing rate would be reduced to 22 cents per $100, the rate currently in effect for Salt Creek Park District residents.

Additional revenue could be lost to the city park district by the immediate outcome of the suit as well since Salt Creek is also seeking to recoup $78,000 from the city district to account for revenue Salt Creek claims to have lost during the 13 years the industrial park was not in its taxing scope.

While it will not be a formal trial, the March preliminary hearing could determine the outcome of the case since it will decide whether Salt Creek can file a legal action to regain control of the park.

Train death victim's inquest postponed

The inquest into the death of Edward H. Shannon, Palatine, who was struck by a train Sunday night, yesterday was postponed to Feb. 21.

The 57-year-old victim, of 1519 N. Northwest Hwy., was hit by a northwest bound Chicago and North Western Ry. train that was pulling out of the Irving Park station. He was pronounced dead at Belmont Hospital in Chicago.

THE FIRST THING to remember when you're learning to swim is to follow instructions, as these youngsters are learning from Jody Unruh, swimming instructor for the Salt Creek Park District. The district is offering learn to swim classes through March 17 at the Arlington Park Towers pool.

INVERNESS MAY BE too near the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks for its own good. This illustration of the NIPCC corridor system places a large portion of the village within a lane recommended for higher-density construction. Called the Finger Plan, development would follow nine "fingers" radiating from the palm of densely populated Chicago areas.

300 police chiefs at Towers

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood recently hosted a meeting of 300 police chiefs from around the state at a three-day convention at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

The semi-annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police featured a question and answer program with five member police chiefs and a team of law enforcement experts from the University of Illinois.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall was accepted into the association during the three-day session.

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrikson was named president of the association. COMMITTEE discussions touched on a host of police problems including department administration, morale and police-community relations.

"We had a whole session on police administrative problems and there were a number of questions on this," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said. During the session the chiefs discussed the value of the new Arlington Heights-based Police Service Bureau, Case said.

The bureau is designed to provide assistance to chiefs in training, operational procedure, communications and other areas of administrative work.

"There were many good ideas presented as far as professionalization of police work," Case said. In a panel seminar sponsored by the Police Training Institute, Case said questions were shown on a screen followed by a discussion of the answers.

The panel discussion format was a new one which Case praised as being "very educational and worth while." He said the convention also included "a good display of equipment" being used in police work.

Euclid extension work delayed

The extension of Euclid Avenue west of Plum Grove Road in Palatine, originally scheduled for construction in the spring, probably will not be undertaken until next year.

Francis B. Stuart, a spokesman for the Cook County Highway Department, yesterday said difficulties have been encountered in acquiring rights-of-way where the extended road is to pass.

Plans call for Euclid to be extended to Roselle Road. When completed, the road will provide a direct route from Arlington Heights to Harper College.

Mrs. Stuart said negotiations to purchase land from three property owners have been unsuccessful, delaying the likelihood that construction could begin this spring.

The project is "on the boards and in the working stages as far as paperwork is concerned," she said.

"But as far as a contract being let, it's quite dubious that work would start this year."

Part of Euclid now extends slightly beyond Plum Grove Road, where it's known as Carlton Avenue.

The highway department plans call for a four-lane road with a mountable median. Cost of the project, which would likely come from county motor vehicle fuel taxes, has not been determined.

Also uncertain is the type of signalization that would be installed where Euclid crosses Plum Grove, Quentin and Roselle roads. Part of the Euclid extension would pass through Palatine and part through unincorporated Palatine Township.

portion of the village within the Chicago and North Western Ry. 10 minutes' drive from the nearest train station, was already developed at a very low density. Homes in this northern segment of Inverness were built on one to five acres of land each. But the undeveloped portion of the village, which is also most susceptible to high density housing, lies in the area recommended for open space.

In reality, the NIPCC corridor system has had very little direct effect on land in or out of the imaginary fingers in the Finger Plan. Local governments have control of zoning within their boundaries, and according to land planner Robert B. Teska, most local agencies are not adhering to the plan.

Teska authored the master plan for Inverness by Barton Aschman Associates, the firm that also helped write the Finger Plan.

THE CHICAGO and North Western Ry. and the Milwaukee Road Ry. form the two corridors between Inverness. The basic intent of the NIPCC plan was to steer commuters toward using the public transportation by concentrating construction along railways rather than highways.

A review of the Finger Plan, particularly as it affects the Barrington area, is scheduled by NIPCC for sometime in the coming two weeks. In the meantime, a Feb. 6 public hearing will involve Inverness residents as they look over their own recently-approved comprehensive plan. That plan as it stands now recommends the first development within the village on less than one acre per home.

The highest density allowed in the plan is two to six units per acre. Other small portions would have one to two units per acre, and the rest of the village would remain at its one unit or less per acre standard.

One reason the density has to stay relatively low is the poor soil for Inverness' septic system. Unless the village joins the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) for its sewers, Teska said the land couldn't support development at much more than one unit per acre.

BUT THE REASON Inverness is likely to become landlocked by other homes, townhouses and apartments shows up in NIPCC's population projections released a few months ago.

Palatine Township, which includes Palatine, Inverness, Rolling Meadows, unincorporated areas and portions of neighboring villages, currently has 55,000 people. In two years, NIPCC projects that the township will total 68,000.

And by 1995, the township's population will more than double its current size. If such a boom becomes a reality, Inverness, the "village with a heritage," is likely to find itself a tiny outpost of country homes in an urban environment.

Mass rally Saturday to protest court's abortion OK

by BARRY SIGALE
The mobilization of outraged Roman Catholics — supported by protesters from every other denomination — has begun for Saturday's mass rally objecting to the Supreme Court's stand on abortion.

On the one hand is the Supreme Court, buoyed by the vocal support of such pro-abortion reform organizations as the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecology and other medical groups as well as women's rights.

On the other hand is the Catholic Church, supported by various "right to life" organizations and others, which claims abortion is not morally right, that the fetus has the same rights as any human being and that the mother has no right to destroy it.

Indeed, encouraging its members, to join the march and rally Saturday. The demonstration is being planned by the Illinois Right to Life Committee, Illinois Citizens Concerned For Life and Birthright.

although the decision "may be legally permissible it is still morally wrong, and no court opinion can change the law of God prohibiting the taking of innocent human life." Several local priests have followed with the same theories.

mean that the killing of American servicemen would end, and the other the court's abortion ruling, which ignores the right to life.

Hennessy, Carey expected to join Republican ticket

Edward J. Hennessy, slated as candidate for township collector, and Brian E. Carey, slated as a township trustee candidate, are two new candidates expected to run under the Republican banner in April's township election.

Daniel Stowe and Walter Wing, trustees. The slate was selected by the Republican Party's central committee this week and will be up for confirmation Sunday during a caucus at Robert Frost Junior High School on west Wise Road, Schaumburg.

are currently done under the county government's authority and are controlled by the Democratic Party. It is a job township officials, traditionally Republicans, want reactivated.

3 of 4 independents on unaffiliated slate

Three of the four independents running for office in Schaumburg Township government are part of a slate, but it is not affiliated with any established organization, two of them said yesterday.

"I saw a need," he said. "We don't have official planks (in a platform) yet, but I saw a need for an opposition slate, one that would present a positive alternative," English said.

HE DOES NOT EXPECT the reactivation, however, and said, "Knowing the courts and how closely they are tied into the Democratic Party, I hardly think they'll give back to the townships what now belongs to the county."

Charles R. (Dick) English, 1918 Cloverdale Ct., Schaumburg, has combined forces with Frank Domenico, 236 Salem Dr., Schaumburg, and Timothy O'Brien, 1401 Elmhurst Ln., Schaumburg, in a try for three of the nine township positions. The three are preparing a platform, which they hope to have ready for presentation by the end of the week, said English.

THE INDEPENDENT platform will concentrate on issues of health, youth and fiscal responsibility, said English. Campaign strategy now is being formulated, he added.

Carey, an Elk Grove Village resident from the township's southeast corner, is a corporation compensation specialist for Montgomery Ward and has been active in Junior Achievement and the Cabrini Green remedial reading program. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Illinois and has done postgraduate work at George Washington University.

While English and O'Brien are members of Schaumburg United Party, and English confirmed he is "very active in SUP," both said there is no formal link between their group and the village political organization. Domenico is not an SUP member.

English, 32, is an accountant and auditor for Arvey Corp. He has been employed by them three years, the same amount of time he has resided in the township at his current address. He holds a bachelor's degree in finance from Indiana University. He and his wife have three children.

Wilkens has lived in the township all his life and has been road commissioner for 12 years. Mrs. Wojcik and MacEachron, both of Schaumburg, have held their posts for five years. Laubenstein, an 11-year resident of the township, has been supervisor for four years, along with auditors Jensen of Hoffman Estates, Wing of Schaumburg and Stowe of Hanover Park. Title of their position is to change to "trustee" once new officeholders take their posts.

The Cellar—a special place set aside for young people

"We would hope to work with SUP, with the Civic Party in Hoffman Estates and with all other interested persons," said English. "This is truly an independent slate," he emphasized.

The Cellar is a lot of things and it could be a lot more. Whether it grows or dies depends on people.

"There is not much furniture in the room at present just a few inflatable chairs and stuffed mushrooms. 'Somehow mushrooms seemed right for The Cellar,' she added.

ENGLISH IS facing incumbent Vernon Laubenstein in a race for township supervisor. O'Brien and Domenico are competing against a full Republican slate for two of the four open trustee seats.

The Cellar is a special place in the new wing of the Schaumburg Township Public Library, the name of a theater group a newspaper and a club.

MISS BALINGALL said a group of young people have been meeting with her every Monday from 7 to 8 p.m. in The Cellar and in the adjoining theatre.

A fourth independent, Francis A. Dunn of Rte. 2, Box 354, unincorporated Schaumburg Township, is not part of the independent slate, said English.

Bonita Balingall, children's librarian, explained that the library set aside the special junior high room users have christened the Cellar. The library is at 32 Library Ln., Schaumburg.

"Right now we are doing improvisations, pantomime and just generally creative drama," she said.

Although English said he and his co-candidates are "running for" an office, "not against" the Republicans, he explained their candidacies as an attempt to provide competition.

"All kinds of activities go on in the room or it can just be a quiet retreat to meet friends, read, listen to music or interact," she explained.

THE CELLAR is the place to be to let your imagination roam, to express yourself creatively or to just pretend you grew a magic mushroom. A creative drama group is part of The Cellar's activities and, from left, Lara Lucchesi, Margaret De Marco, Sue Mockbee and Robin Polonsky participate. The facility is in the Schaumburg Township Public Library lower level.

Jaycees to sponsor speed skate tourney

The Schaumburg Jaycees will sponsor their second annual speed skating tournament Feb. 3 at the Twinbrook YMCA Pond on Wise Road in Schaumburg.

The event will offer age group competition for area youngsters ages 6 through 15. Registration will open at 11 a.m.

Races ranging from 110 to 600 yards will be offered. The YMCA pond is located adjacent to the Robert Frost Junior High School.

Leaflets containing registration forms will be distributed in all Elementary Dist. 54 schools. The forms should be completed and submitted on the day of the tournament.

In case of bad weather, the tournament will be held Feb. 10. Further information may be obtained by calling either 894-6793 or 529-2454.

Billiards, table tennis tournament slated

A billiards and table tennis tournament will be sponsored by the Schaumburg Park District Feb. 10 at the Jennings House Youth Center, 220 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg.

The tournament will be open to all area youngsters, according to recreation supervisor Sharon Mattioli. Youngsters must register for the tournament by Feb. 9.

The Jennings House is open from 4 p.m. until 8 p.m. and 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. daily. The facility is closed on Wednesday evening. The Jennings House is also open from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday.

Trophies will be awarded to the winners of each tournament and ribbons will be given to second and third place finishers. Competition will be staged on an age group basis.

More information about the tournament can be obtained by calling the park district at 894-4660.

Card party to aid fund for hospital

A portion of the proceeds from the Schaumburg United Party Woman's Auxiliary card party scheduled for Feb. 9 will be earmarked for the Rush-Presbyterian St. Luke's-North Hospital fund.

The event will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight in St. Marc's Community Center, 609 S. Springline Rd.

Tickets are $2 per person including admission and door prizes and refreshments will be served.

To purchase tickets contact Peggy Kohn, 894-4677, or Shirley LeBeau, 894-7462.

Twinbrook Y campaigners pledge to top $12,000

"Quota busters."

That's what Twinbrook YMCA membership roundup campaign workers aim to be. During a patron kick-off luncheon signaling the beginning of the $34,650 sustaining membership drive, division chairmen pledged yesterday to top the business goal of $12,000.

This year's total Twinbrook YMCA sustaining membership drive goal of $34,650, is split in two drives. The patron drive goal is $12,000 and the family drive, $22,650.

Schaumburg Township Supervisor Vern Laubenstein, chairman of the patron drive, told division chairmen, "We not only can make it, but will top our goal."

He pledged that half of every dollar raised in the business drive, after the $12,000 goal is reached, will be used to provide free camp to youngsters.

This year in honor of Schaumburg's Joseph Keller who in 1971 died of leukemia the grants will be named the "Joseph Keller Campships."

Without a successful sustaining membership campaign there will be no YMCA, said Laubenstein.

THE TWINBROOK YMCA serves Bloomingdale, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Keeneyville, Medinah, Roselle and Schaumburg.

Like other YMCA's the Twinbrook Y must secure locally its entire operating budget.

Robert Williams, executive director, said Y camp and club registration fees do not pay for the Y's operation. They pay only direct cost of the programs.

The Twinbrook Y, though without a facility, has successfully established and operated programs that involve nearly 3,000 members.

Williams said the Y in 1972 experienced a 27 per cent increase in membership. Some of the programs operated last year are:

- Indian Guides, 826 boys and dads; Indian Princess, 339 girls and dads; Gray-Y, 130 boys and girls; and Junior High Y, 34 boys and girls in five clubs.
- Y's Men and Triangle clubs involved 50 men and women; Day camp 195 boys and girls, and the Y-Resident Camp, 123 boys and girls.
- After-school swimming instruction a new program, now involves 83 youngsters, and the Y-Teen-age camps 63 youngsters.
- Y-Family camps participation included 82 family members and all the programs are operated by 233 men and women who volunteer as leaders.

"This is part of what went on in the Y last year," said Williams.

FUNDS COLLECTED in the 1973 membership drive will continue to provide the services for the expanding programs of Y-Indian Guides, Y-Indian Princess, Gray-Y and junior high school programs.

They will also create a new program for fourth to sixth grade girls, expand camping to new residence camps, bike hiking, travel day camp and enlarge past experiences. The money will also maintain two full-time professional staffers and the rented YMCA headquarters for one year.

Laubenstein told the chairmen the best encouragement they could give to family drive campaign workers is to complete the business drive successfully by Feb. 15, when the family drive begins.

Girl's faith pays off - 'her' Vietnam prisoner is coming home

by NANCY COWGER

A 12-year-old Hoffman Estates girl is one of many suburban residents gratified in the past few days by learning a particular American serviceman captured in the Vietnam War is listed for release within 60 days.

Daren Barr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Barr, 186 Harvard Ln., Monday found the name of Lt. Col. Edison Miller on the first list of prisoners scheduled for release by the North Vietnamese. Miller, a Marine, was captured Oct. 13, 1967.

Daren has been wearing a POW bracelet inscribed with Miller's name for two years. "I haven't taken it off at all, except for gym," she said.

"I was pretty excited" when Miller's name showed up among the first 23 prisoners confirmed as being held by the North Vietnamese, said Daren. She called her mother to come and see Miller's name too, and since then she has been settling plans to mail Miller the bracelet when he returns home, along with a letter.

"I just want to let him know that I was thinking about him, even though I didn't know him," said Daren.

cally, through a school friend who's father ordered a large number to sell in the community. Many of her other friends also purchased them then, but Daren said she does not know if the POWs on their bracelets have been listed yet.

In the two years, Daren removed the bracelet only to comply with school requirements prohibiting wearing jewelry in gym class. She wrote to Miller's family once, she said, although she did not receive an answer.

Daren does not expect an answer now either. "He might not want to talk about it," she said.

Zoning hearings in March or April

Howie settlement nearing

The elements for settlement of the Howie-In-The-Hills lawsuit involving the Village of Hoffman Estates appear to be taking shape, according to comments made yesterday by attorneys handling negotiations.

"We're very close to settlement" with the Teamsters Union Pension Fund, said Steve Bashwiner. He is attorney for the federal receivership now holding title to the land pending a sale to Meridian Investment and Development Co. "I believe we've just about agreed on the terms of settlement," said Bashwiner.

Final negotiations with another party to the case, a group of persons who bought bonds to finance public improvements in the Howie site, have not yet begun, said Bashwiner. He foresees no difficulties or complications in reaching a compromise with the bondholders.

Bashwiner said it appears the settlement now will depend on the village, and its willingness to grant zoning desired by Meridian.

"I WOULD suspect in March or April they (the village plan commission and village board) could hold hearings" on zoning, said Bashwiner. The village has promised full disclosure of the plan for development of the 497-acre site and ample opportunity for public comment on the plan before a decision on zoning is rendered. The site is north of the Winston Knolls subdivision, along both sides of Palatine Road.

Bashwiner said the terms of the settlement will be revealed when it is approved by the federal courts supervising the receivership.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert indicated yesterday he had not met with Bashwiner since Jan. 15, when the second and last negotiating meeting between the village board and representatives of Meridian was held. More negotiating sessions will be scheduled in the near future, Hofert predicted. In the meeting with Bashwiner, said Hofert, terms of the settlement with the Teamsters Union and the bondholders were discussed.

The Howie site has been in receivership since 1964, when the former title holder, City Savings Association of Chicago, went bankrupt.

THE BONDS were to finance installation of sewers, water mains and other public improvements at the site, as was a loan from the Teamsters Union. The improvements already had been installed.

The federal court this summer ordered sale of the subdivision, to liquidate assets of the savings association and partially repay its depositors. Meridian was highest bidder for the land, quoting $5.6 million. The sale was approved, pending settlement to obtain clear title and the granting of zoning by the village. Details of the zoning request have not been revealed to date, although the village and its consultants have completed impact studies.

Village dropping battle on Haskins development

The village of Hoffman Estates will not go any further on an Illinois Appellate Court ruling approving development of the 78-acre Haskins property with 1,352 apartments in 28 four-story buildings.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert met Monday night in an executive session with the village board and Village Mgr. George Longmeyer. The decision not to pursue the matter in the courts was made then, said Hofert and Longmeyer.

However, the board has not abandoned efforts to obtain some other type development. "We have advised (Robert) Haskins that we would entertain another plan if he wishes to submit it," Hofert said yesterday. "He has not responded." Haskins is the attorney representing a group of owners of the property.

Among the owners are prominent Chicago Democrats including Aldermen Thomas Keane and Paul Wigoda; George Keane, Cook County zoning board chairman; Frank Chesrow, former Metropolitan Sanitary District president, and David Chesrow, his brother.

THE ACREAGE lies between Bradwell and Palatine roads at the village's western boundary, immediately west of Howie In-The-Hills, a nondeveloped subdivision now the subject of negotiations on a development plan with the goal of settling extensive legal suits.

Legal action on the Haskins property was initiated in 1970. The land previously was zoned commercial. The village board responded to Haskins' request for multiple family residential zoning by rezoning the land for single family homes, and Haskins filed suit. Circuit Court Judge Herbert Ellis ruled in favor of Haskins, and the village board appealed. The appeal has been pending since October, and a ruling supporting Ellis' decision was received Jan. 19.

Hofert said the board chose not to contest the Jan. 19 ruling because "it feels that the decision of the court is final. A study of the opinion indicates that the chances of reversing that opinion by petition are very remote."

Hofert also indicated there is the possibility that Haskins will seek approval of a new plan anyway. He does not anticipate any immediate action on the apartment plan, he said. Another village official said that the apartment market in the area seems satisfied, and the addition of another 1,352 apartment units might not be financially sound for the owners.

Mass rally Saturday to protest court's abortion OK

by BARRY SIGALE
The mobilization of outraged Roman Catholics — supported by protesters from every other denomination — has begun for Saturday's mass rally objecting to the Supreme Court's stand on abortion.

In what may become a bigger and more volatile issue than the church's controversial stand on divorce, the two sides have been clearly drawn.
ON THE ONE hand is the Supreme Court, buoyed by the vocal support of such pro-abortion reform organizations as the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecology and other medical groups as well as women's rights.

interests of the expectant mother to terminate her pregnancy in its early stages, that for either psychological or physical reasons the mother's fetus should not be allowed to become a human being.
On the other hand is the Catholic Church, supported by various "right to life" organizations and others, which claims abortion is not morally right, that the fetus has the same rights as any human being and that the mother has no right to destroy it.
THE CHICAGO Archdiocese of the Catholic Church is now supporting, and, indeed, encouraging its members, to join the march and rally Saturday. The demonstration is being planned by the Illinois Right to Life Committee, Illinois Citizens Concerned For Life and Birthright.

Activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. in front of the Federal Building at 219 S. Dearborn and culminates at the civic center. Among those expected to speak is John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago.
SINCE LAST week's statement by the Committee for Pro-Life Affairs of the National Council of Catholic Bishops that although the decision "may be legally permissible it is still morally wrong, and no court opinion can change the law of God prohibiting the taking of innocent human life." Several local priests have followed with the same theories.

Rev. Donald Duffy of St. Mary's Church in Buffalo Grove contrasted the Supreme Court's decision with President Nixon's peace achievements, both matters having a direct bearing on life.
He said it was "most difficult to reconcile two days which follow back to back," one the truce in Vietnam, which meant that the killing of American servicemen would end, and the other the court's abortion ruling, which ignores the right to life.

(In its (the court's) decision, it said that it is illegal for the state to place any restrictions on mother during the first three months of her pregnancy. This decision rests in the hands of her and her physician. What about the right to life of the fetus? If we say nothing about the biological fact that there is life after conception do we make Gods out of physicians? (Continued on Page 5)

Policemen to present 10 demands
Village officials to meet CCPA at bargaining table

For the first time, Mount Prospect village officials will sit down tonight at the bargaining table with representatives of the Combined Counties Police Association.
Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said tonight's session will be primarily a preliminary session. "We want to get an explanation of their list of demands," Eppley said. The village will be represented by Eppley, Finance Director Richard L. Jesse and Bernard Lee, a local attorney chosen to head the negotiating team. Lee has a background in labor negotiations, Eppley said.
Patrolman Warren Fischer, local CCPA chapter head, recently said his group would have 10 demands, including:

longevity pay increases, across-the-board salary hikes which may exceed 5% per cent, a better vacation package, personal days off, time-and-a-half for overtime, a written contract and establishment of a formalized grievance procedure.
TONIGHT'S TALKS, although the first with police, will be the second this week with village employees. Eppley met for two hours yesterday morning with representatives of the fire department.
"Eppley said that at the meeting "I got a full explanation of what they have in mind." He would not elaborate on what was discussed, other than to say the four-man wage committee made what amounted to a single proposal with an alternate concerned with compensation. He said he preferred any statements on the proposal to come from the firemen.

Fire Lt. Raymond Kordecki, a member of the wage committee, said yesterday that only generalities were discussed at the meeting. He said the firemen made no demands and would not until Eppley knew what monies the village might have available in the upcoming year to spend on employees.
Kordecki added that the firemen's committee will be meeting with Eppley again within the next 30 days. Other talks with the police organization are also expected to take place over the next month. Eppley has promised to give the village board a tentative budget by March 1.

Her prayer for Vietnam POW heard

When the POW bracelet Dawn Bach was wearing for a captured GI broke last summer, her friends told her that meant he was dead.
But she wouldn't believe them. "I just told them no, that it wasn't true," said Dawn, who lives in Mount Prospect. And she was right.
The man who Dawn has been praying for for the past year is coming home. She found out Sunday that King David Rayford of Chicago would be one of the first to return to the States. Her mother woke her up to give her the news.
Dawn, almost 15 and a freshman at Prospect High School, said she has been wondering about Rayford ever since she got the bracelet — wondering about where he lived, how old he was, what he was like. She has learned something of Rayford through newspaper stories on him and his family.
RAYFORD IS 26, has a 7-year-old son and lives at 7945 S. Saginaw Ave. He was listed as missing in action in 1967 and declared a prisoner of war 1 1/2 years later.
"I'm going to write a letter to him and tell him I'm glad he's home," said Dawn, 101 S. William St. "I want to send him the bracelet although I don't know if he'll want it because it's broken."

Library expansion in village budget

A fund for the expansion of the Mount Prospect Public Library will be established as part of the 1973-74 village budget.
How much the capital improvements fund for the library will depend on the village's financial condition.
Establishment of the fund for at least the next five years was unofficially agreed upon at a meeting Monday night among members of the library board, Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley and Mayor Robert D. Teichert.
The library board has stated that the library, at 14 E. Bust Ave., must be expanded over the next few years, and library trustees say the current available space should be tripled to provide proper services for the current village population.

TEICHERT ASKED the library board, represented by Pres. John Parsons, Mary Ellen Brady, Jack Anderson and Robert Nordli, to present, along with their regular budget request to Eppley, a summary of how much expansion they will require, approximately what it will cost and about when they would like to start building. Library board members plan to turn over their budget request to Eppley during the latter part of February.
According to Teichert, Eppley would then look at the total village budget and other requests for funds and determine how much could be set aside for the library's capital improvement fund.

While no definite figures were offered, Teichert used $20,000 a year as an average figure. There is a possibility, and the federal regulations permit it, that some of the revenue sharing funds may be used for the library's capital improvement program.
"I always try to avoid a referendum, even for the library," Teichert said. Mrs. Brady agreed, saying she felt the taxpayers looked on referenda as attempts by public bodies to make up for their not having the foresight to save through the years toward expansion.
TEICHERT pointed out that the fund could start next fiscal year and continue even beyond the actual construction. He said the village board has the power to borrow money.
Currently the library has a $3,000-a-year fund set aside for capital improvements. But Parsons called this a token amount, used primarily for payment of consultant fees for planning.
Parsons said the library board would like to work with the village and become part of the plan to renovate the downtown section. He said alternatives, such as building a new library in Lions Park, are not as appealing. He said they like the current centralized location.
Teichert said the village would also prefer to expand in the downtown area because it would help the businessmen there too.

FOR DAWN BACH of Mount Prospect, this bracelet has meant nearly a year of hoping and praying that GI King David Rayford would return. The waiting ended Sunday when Dawn found out he is coming home.

Ward seeks chance to run a ward

Richard Ward, Mount Prospect Park District board commissioner whose term expires in April has filed as a candidate in the Des Plaines 8th Ward aldermanic election.
Ward, of 1410 Miami Ln., will challenge Ald. Robert Michaels (8th). Michaels was elected to a two-year term in 1967 when the ward was formed on an anti-Metropolitan Sanitary District sewage plant pledge. He was reelected to a four-year term in 1969. Ward is a "close friend" of Michaels and succeeded him as president of the Devonshire Homeowners Association in 1967.

A United Air Lines pilot who backed Michaels' election in 1969, Ward is an outspoken critic of the proposed MSD project which would be located in the ward. His petitions were filed by two campaign workers.

Careers day Tuesday at River Trails

David Baum, Mount Prospect resident and host of "Contact," a radio talk show, will be among 33 professionals who will speak to students at Creative Careers Day Tuesday at River Trails Junior High School, Mount Prospect.
The 33 speakers range from graphic designer to a mime artist. Each will give four presentations concerning their career to students at the junior high. They will also talk to all the Mount Prospect Dist. 57 sixth-graders, who will be bussed to the junior high for the program.

Careers Day begins at noon with a luncheon for the speakers and their guests. Career presentations follow at 1 p.m.

Steal janitorial goods

The theft of $2,164 worth of janitorial equipment from a building at 1320 S. Elmhurst Rd. took place Sunday night, according to Mount Prospect police. The building was entered by a window on the north side. The owner is the Littlestone Co. of Chicago.

The local scene

'Going-away' present for thieves here

One of his last days in Mount Prospect may have proved to be one of his unhappiest.

Dan G. McCoy, 406 N. Eastwood Ave., may have been the one leaving town to move to 225 N. Clark, Palatine, but the thieves who struck Sunday night helped themselves to a going-away present.

Mount Prospect police said a 50-h.p. Mercury outboard motor and a tool box were stolen from McCoy's garage Sunday night. The value of the loss was placed at $475. McCoy had been in the process of moving the day of the theft.

Lincoln jazz band to play at Oak Lawn

Members of the Lincoln Junior High School Jazz Band will travel to Oak Lawn Friday to compete in the 14th Annual Oak Lawn Jazz Festival.

Band members will compete against 10 other junior high school bands from throughout the metropolitan area. Trophies will be awarded for superior performances. Several top band names will act as judges at the festival, including Mike Vox, former lead trumpet player with the Stan Kenton band. This is the first time the Mount Prospect band has been invited to compete in the festival. The band is sponsored by the Mount Prospect Boosters, a parent group from Mount Prospect School Dist. 57.

PTA notes

The Spinning Lady, Julia Jordan, will show children at Busse School how to spin wool on Wednesday starting at 9 a.m. The cultural arts program, sponsored by the Busse PTA, will be held at the school, 101 N. Owen St., Mount Prospect. Parents are invited to attend.

"BEST FOOT FORWARD," an open house for PTA members, will be held at the Park View School, 805 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect Feb. 13. The meeting, which starts at 7:30 p.m., will also include the nomination of PTA officers for next year.

ALMA MacLEOD of American Airlines will present a program on skiing at the next general meeting of the Forest View Elementary School P.T.O. at 8 p.m. on Feb. 15.

The presentation will include everything from packing to resorts. William's Ski House of Highland Park will present a fashion show with former American Airlines stewardesses acting as models. Refreshments will be served following the program. The school is located at 1901 Estates Dr., Mount Prospect.

Northwest Opportunity Center Seeks $32,000

Officials of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows are seeking $32,000 in contributions from local municipalities to help finance the center for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Letters have been sent to 14 area municipalities seeking permission for center officials to make a presentation to the governing board and request financial support.

The first presentation was made Monday to the Arlington Heights Village Board. The board agreed to contribute $4,600.

The municipal contributions are needed to offset the difference between the center's total operating budget of $130,000 and the projected $82,000 the center will receive from the federal government.

IN ADDITION to the municipal contributions, the center must raise another $35,000 locally. Center officials hope to do this through their annual "Rilke for Hunger," contributions from churches and other local organizations and a cash balance at the start of the new fiscal year on April 1.

The 1973-74 budget represents an increase of more than $35,000 over this year's budget. Bruce Newton, center director, explained the increase is necessary to finance a full-time employment person at the center, hire a third outreach worker and finance the Operation Nutrition program for seven months after federal funding is cut off.

Of the center's budget approximately $80,000 will be used for personnel and the remaining $50,000 for non-personnel expenses.

The center also hopes to establish a $15,000 contingency fund this year. This would be used if federal funds are cut off during the year to help phase out programs gradually or until programs could be taken over by other agencies, said Newton.

NEWTON EXPLAINED the $82,000 in federal funds will be allotted to the center by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity provided the money is there. President Richard M. Nixon in his budget message has stated he would like to phase out all OEO funding by July and make this a local responsibility to be taken care of through revenue sharing funds. The budget is now before Congress.

"We are really in a crisis position," said Newton.

Newton said if the federal funding is cut off the center would probably go to the six townships it serves and municipalities in those townships and ask them to make up the difference.

In determining how much to ask from each municipality the center divided the number of persons served by the center this year, more than 1,700 into $22,000. This came out to $19.06. The number of persons from each municipality was then computed and multiplied by

THE FUNDING requests are: Arlington Heights, 241 persons, $4,593.46; Wheeling, 137 persons, $2,611.22; Barrington, 36 persons, $686.16; Palatine 274 persons, $5,222.44; Hanover Park, 58 persons, $1,105.48; Roselle, 26 persons, $495.56; Schaumburg, 25 persons, $476.50; Streamwood, 90 persons, $1,715.40; Des Plaines, 183 persons, $3,487.90; Hoffman Estates, 66 persons, $1,257.96; Rolling Meadows, 129 persons, $2,458.74; Elk Grove Village, 65 persons, $1,238.90; Prospect Heights, 14 persons, $266.84; Mount Prospect, 105 persons, $2,001.30 and other, 250 persons, $4,765.

Last year the center attempted to raise $25,000 from area municipalities served by the center. Arlington Heights and Hoffman Estates were the only villages to contribute directly but Palatine officials set up a fund for the center. Approximately $5,000 was contributed by municipalities last year.

Newton is optimistic that municipalities will be more responsive this year because of the additional funds they have received from revenue sharing and because federal funding for the center is in jeopardy.

Among the services the center offers are adult education, legal assistance, operation nutrition, emergency food, family planning and income tax aid.

Liebenow won't seek library reelection

Mount Prospect Public Library Board trustee Gil Liebenow will not seek reelection to the board this spring.

"I have had 7½ happy years on the library board," he said yesterday. "I have other civic duties in the community I would now like to pursue."

Liebenow is the senior member of the current board. He was appointed to the board in 1966, then elected to a six-year term in 1967. In December, Liebenow said he had not made up his mind but "my natural inclination is to step aside."

Two library board seats are to be filled in the April 17 village election. However, so far only one person has filed as a candidate. He is Jack Anderson, 18 N. Maple St., who was appointed earlier this month to serve on the board until April in the unexpired part of former Board Pres. Thomas F. Grady's term. Grady resigned in November.

Anyone interested in filing for the two vacancies may pick up nominating petitions at the village clerk's office, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. The deadline for filing is Feb. 12 and only 50 signatures of registered voters are required.

Gill opposes unit school district 'if it hurts us'

by WANDALYN RICE

Supt. Kenneth Gill of Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 has vowed he will stop Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 from forming a unit school district if it would result in financial harm to High School Dist. 214.

At a meeting of the Walt Whitman PTA in Wheeling Monday Gill said, "I'm damn well biased against a unit district under the present system," and added that he will oppose Dist. 59 if it tries to take more tax base than it takes students from Dist. 214.

Dist. 59 is now in the midst of a feasibility study on forming a unit district, which would combine all elementary and high schools under a single school board in that area.

Preliminary figures have indicated that a unit district composed of all of Dist. 59 and including Elk Grove and Forest View high schools from Dist. 214 would take about 28 per cent of the students from Dist. 214 and would also take about 37 per cent of the tax base.

AREA SCHOOL districts now are organized as "dual districts," and the elementary and high schools are under separate school boards.

"I don't care what Dist. 59 does," Gill said. "I dare them to try to form a unit district that would take that much assessed value from Dist. 214. If Dist. 214 doesn't take them to court, we will."

However, Gill added that if Dist. 59 proposed a unit district that would not hurt Dist. 214 "that's fine with me. I'm tired of fooling around with those people. I think the move to a unit district down there is based on their parochialism and desire to go their own way."

In the remarks made in conjunction with a panel discussion on the subject of unit districts, Gill also attacked the assumption that unit school districts can improve the quality of education by providing a continuous program.

Gill said he worked in a downstate unit school district as an assistant superintendent and communication between elementary and high schools was worse there than it is under the dual school system in the Northwest suburbs.

"In that unit district, kindergarten and first grade kids didn't get any attention or money. It was the high schools, with their bands and football teams, that got everything. You'd be amazed at the fanaticism that built up. The only way I got a new junior high school was because they built a new high school and gave the younger kids the old one," he said.

GILL ALSO took a swipe at a proposal by Schaumburg Mayor Robert Atcher that a unit district be formed within the village limits of Schaumburg, removing that area from Elementary Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211. The proposal, he said, will only help Atcher in "becoming a pseudo-Mayor Daley."

Gill also said he will oppose any move to make High School Dist. 214 a unit district by absorbing all the feeder elementary school districts. The 214-wide unit would have more than 50,000 students and, Gill said, "Any district that would go over 50,000 student population takes on all the characteristics of a centralized state with no communication with its people."

Gill admitted that under present Illinois law unit school districts are entitled to more state aid than dual districts, but said he believes that inequity will be ended either by legislation or by court decisions.

DEAN MACK, a representative of State School Supt. Michael Bakalis's office of school reorganization, another participant on the panel, cautioned Gill about being too confident of defeating a unit district try in Dist. 59.

Under the law, Mack said, persons who petition to have a unit district formed can go to court if their petition is denied by the county and state school superintendents. However, he said, the law does not provide for a judicial review for opponents of a unit district if a petition is approved and a referendum held.

Mack said the law is currently being challenged in a case involving the Bensenville schools, but added, "The way the law is written, dual districts are definitely vulnerable."

Old lawsuit delayed again so lawyer can study case

A ruling on a lawsuit filed nearly two years ago against Wheeling by Prospect Heights residents has again been delayed — this time so a new lawyer for the plaintiffs can become acquainted with the case.

Don Kreger, attorney who has been representing the Prospect Heights group known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, said yesterday he is withdrawing from the case at the request of the state's attorney's office. Kreger said he had been appointed a special assistant to the state's attorney's office so he could take the case known as "The People vs. Wheeling." He was appointed under former State Atty. Edward Hanrahan.

"I received a call saying that the current state's attorney (C. Bernard Carey) is against special assistants assigned to state cases," Kreger said. "I will turn the file over to the state's attorney."

Kreger said Assistant State's Atty. Paul Blebel would probably handle the case which has been continued in Cook County Circuit Court until March 19. Blebel said yesterday he would probably be assigned to the case and added it would not be dropped. He said he could not say any more on the matter.

THIS IS THE TENTH continuance in the suit, filed in March 1971, charging that Wheeling illegally annexed the 40 acres near Wheeling Road north of Camp McDonald Road. Previous requests for continuances came from Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer and Arnold Liebling, owner of the property who has intervened in the suit.

The suit contends Wheeling's annexation of the site was illegal because the land is not contiguous to the village. A Circuit Court judge's ruling in November, 1971 agreed with the group's contention. Wheeling attorneys then filed a motion saying the annexation should be allowed anyway because the Prospect Heights group waited too long before filing. The suit was filed 44 days, after the

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood recently hosted a meeting of 300 police chiefs from around the state at a three-day convention at the Arlington Park Towers Hotel.

The semi-annual meeting of the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police featured a question and answer program with five member police chiefs and a team of law enforcement experts from the University of Illinois.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall was accepted into the association during the three-day session.

Niles Police Chief Clarence Emrickson was named president of the association. COMMITTEE discussions touched on a host of police problems including department administration, morale and police-community relations.

"We had a whole session on police administrative problems and there were a number of questions on this," Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis Case said. During the session the chiefs discussed the value of the new Arlington Heights-based Police Service Bureau, Case said.

The bureau is designed to provide assistance to chiefs in training, operational procedure, communications and other areas of administrative work.

"There were many good ideas presented as far as professionalization of police work," Case said. In a panel seminar sponsored by the Police Training Institute, Case said questions were shown on a screen followed by a discussion of the answers.

Mass rally Saturday to protest court's abortion OK

by BARRY SIGALE
The mobilization of outraged Roman Catholics — supported by protesters from every other denomination — has begun for Saturday's mass rally objecting to the Supreme Court's stand on abortion.

In what may become a bigger and more volatile issue than the church's controversial stand on divorce, the two sides have been clearly drawn.
ON THE ONE hand is the Supreme Court, buoyed by the vocal support of such pro-abortion reform organizations as the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecology and other medical groups as well as women's rights.

interests of the expectant mother to terminate her pregnancy in its early stages, that for either psychological or physical reasons the mother's fetus should not be allowed to become a human being.
On the other hand is the Catholic Church, supported by various "right to life" organizations and others, which claims abortion is not morally right, that the fetus has the same rights as any human being and that the mother has no right to destroy it.

Indeed, encouraging its members, to join the march and rally Saturday. The demonstration is being planned by the Illinois Right to Life Committee, Illinois Citizens Concerned For Life and Birthright.
Activities will begin at 1:30 p.m. in front of the Federal Building at 219 S. Dearborn and culminate at the civic center. Among those expected to speak is John Cardinal Cody, Archbishop of Chicago.

Citizen's committee to seek April referendum on flood control package

by KURT BAER
The Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding last night voted to aim for a $7 to $10 million flood control referendum coincident with the village elections April 3.
Many of the details of the referendum campaign remain to be worked out, but the committee did schedule public hearings on Feb. 6 and Feb. 13 to explain the flood control improvements recommended in a report prepared by R. J. Peterson and Assoc., consulting engineer.

control package. The report proposes that the $8.25 million difference would come from the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) and the federal and state governments.
PALMATIER SAID he thought April 3 was a good target date because it coincided with the village park district and library board elections and also because the damage inflicted by last summer's floods would still be fresh in the voters' minds.
It is not known yet what the increase to the tax rate would be if the referendum was passed, although Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said he would have the tax impact figures calculated within a week.

Pioneer Park, Weller Creek, Salt Creek and other minor projects would be set for Feb. 18.
Several committee members thought the April 3 deadline was too short a time in which to organize the referendum, and two committee members, Frank Rebeck and Joan Hammerston, voted against adopting that target date.
Palmatier called a referendum on the proposed improvements "the straightforward way to raise the $10.25 million."
HE TERMED paying for the projects gradually, using for example utility tax money, a "no brains approach" and said that ultimately this would cost more money and take 10 to 15 years to complete.

One of the biggest land acquisition proposals is land for a 100-acre retention lake east of Windsor Drive along McDonald Creek. The total estimated cost of this project is $9.8 million, with the MSD's recommended share being $5.7 million.
Land purchase cost for the project has been estimated at nearly $1.7 million.
Peterson told the committee last night that he has discussed the so-called Lake Arlington proposal with the MSD and that they were "especially interested." He said the project is eligible for MSD funding because it would benefit the entire region, not just the Village of Arlington Heights.
Other improvements, specifically those proposed for Volz, Pioneer and Hasbrook parks will need the cooperation of the Arlington Heights Park District.
Palmatier said he would begin working immediately to secure park district approval of the basins proposed for those parks.

Open Caucus? Don't you believe it

Editor's Note: (Herald Metropolitan Editor Roger Capetini spent more than a month as a voting member of the Arlington Heights Caucus recommendation committee. He provides a closeup look at the village's most powerful political organization.)
by ROGER CAPETINI
Last in a Series
John J. Walsh will be elected the next village president of Arlington Heights on the basis of a 38-minute campaign.
While Walsh is waiting into office, four trustees — Alice Harms, Richard Durava, Graeme George, and David Griffin — will follow, based on their 34-minute campaigns. Trustee Frank Palmatier will have invested 38 minutes.
Because the deadline for filing as candidates for the village elections has passed uneventfully, there six candidates will run unopposed April 3. Without opposition they, realistically, can be elected without so much as appearing before a single homeowners' association. Their total campaigntime investment could amount to the 30 minutes each spent in interview with the caucus Candidate Heights Caucus can be called an optical illusion — the system which exists on paper bears little resemblance to the one in operation. It pretends to be many things it is not.

INITIALLY, IT IS not "open," despite calling itself the Arlington Heights Open Caucus Party. While that term may be applicable in that any registered voter is permitted to attend the two open meetings, over-all caucus operations, more accurately, are exclusive and closed.
The Caucus Party normally does an enthusiastic job every two years of promoting caucus candidates after they have been selected. But in the 19-month gap between election and reformation of the caucus in November there is virtually no effort made to educate residents in caucus operations and encourage their future participation.
Instead of attracting that broad-based public participation, the caucus appears content with the system as it works from year to year — a small segment of the community controlling the elective process.

Additionally, while the system looks good on paper, the actual operation traditionally excludes certain segments of the community. Designed to keep national party labels out of village government, the caucus more often works to keep Democrats out of village elections.
Appearing before the Candidate Recommendation Committee this year, one candidate mentioned he has been associated with the Democratic Party for years, but added he recently has drifted away from the party's philosophy. At least two members of the committee, later speaking in his behalf, urged his selection despite his former party affiliation.
Several potential candidates declined to appear before the recommendation committee because their addresses would tip off their apartment residences.
They point to the caucus' avowed purpose which clearly disfavors multi-family development, as a strike against them.
PERHAPS THE greatest illusion surrounding the caucus is the pretense the by-laws eliminate campaigning, or "electioneering."

The local scene

Euclid extension work is delayed

The extension of Euclid Avenue west of Plum Grove Road in Palatine, originally scheduled for construction in the spring, probably will not be undertaken until next year.

Francine B. Stuart, a spokesman for the Cook County Highway Department, yesterday said difficulties have been encountered in acquiring rights-of-way where the extended road is to pass.

Plans call for Euclid to be extended to Roselle Road. When completed, the road will provide a direct route from Arlington Heights to Harper College.

Mrs. Stuart said negotiations to purchase land from three property owners have been unsuccessful, delaying the likelihood that construction could begin this spring.

The project is "on the boards and in the working stages as far as paperwork is concerned," she said.

"But as far as a contract being let, it's quite dubious that work would start this year."

Part of Euclid now extends slightly beyond Plum Grove Road, where it's known as Carlton Avenue.

The highway department plans call for a four-lane road with a mountable median. Cost of the project, which would likely come from county motor vehicle fuel taxes, has not been determined.

Also uncertain is the type of signalization that would be installed where Euclid crosses Plum Grove, Quentin and Roselle roads. Part of the Euclid extension would pass through Palatine and part through unincorporated Palatine Township.

$85,000 pipe organ

A new $85,000 pipe organ at the First Presbyterian Church, 302 N. Dunton, Arlington Heights, will be dedicated Sunday at 4 p.m.

The organ, which includes over 2,000 pipes, has been in the planning stages by church members for about five years. It was installed in November.

Richard Enright, who earned a doctor of music degree from Northwestern University, will perform the dedicatory recital. Enright, an associate professor of music at Northwestern, was a consultant to the church's organ committee.

Included in the organ recital will be Te Deum by Jean Langlais; Bach preludes; Le Jardin Suspendu by Jehan Alain and Echo by Samuel Scheidt.

There will be a reception in the fellowship hall following the service.

Bridge, dance classes scheduled at park

Bridge and dance classes will begin at Recreation Park, 500 E. Mber during February.

On Feb. 5, a beginners bridge class will begin. The classes will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Monday evenings. Cost of the six-week course is $8.

Modern dance classes will begin Feb. 7 for children six through nine years old at 7 p.m. and from 10 to 13 years old at 8 p.m. The classes will meet for one hour per week for six weeks and will cost $8.

Openings still are available in the preschool playcenter at Recreation Park. The classes are held on Mondays and Wednesdays from 9 to 11 a.m. or from 2 to 3 p.m. for 10 weeks starting Feb. 26.

Registration for all classes is held at Recreation Park from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Rainbow Girls make boxes for Headstart

Forty felt boxes for the Headstart program were recently completed by the International Order of Rainbow Girls, Wheeling Assembly 81, of Arlington Heights.

The project is one of several yearly charity projects of the group. The boxes will be used by children to learn the alphabet, numbers, shapes and colors.

Pioneer Park plans Aloha Night Sunday

Films, fresh pineapple, leis and a dance presentation of the hula will be included in Aloha Night at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez, Arlington Heights, at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Residents are urged to participate in the festivities and wear aloha shirts and brightly colored clothes. The fee for the evening is $1, payable in advance at Pioneer Park or at the door.

Other activities at Pioneer Park which will begin during February include yoga and golf classes.

Yoga classes will begin Feb. 23 and last for eight weeks. Beginners classes will be held Fridays at 9 a.m. and continuing yoga classes will be held Fridays at 10 a.m. The class fee is $10.

Golf classes will begin Feb. 26. Four class sections will be held which include a Monday class at 9 a.m.; a Tuesday class at 7 p.m.; a Wednesday class at 9 a.m., and a Thursday class at 7 p.m. Each class will meet once a week for two hours.

The course fee is $15.

Northwest Opportunity Center seeks funds

Officials of the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows are seeking $32,000 in contributions from local municipalities to help finance the center for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

Letters have been sent to 14 area municipalities seeking permission for center officials to make a presentation to the governing board and request financial support.

The first presentation was made Monday to the Arlington Heights Village Board. The board agreed to contribute $4,600.

The municipal contributions are needed to offset the difference between the center's total operating budget of $130,000 and the projected $82,000 the center will receive from the federal government.

IN ADDITION to the municipal contributions, the center must raise another $36,000 locally. Center officials hope to do this through their annual "Hike for Hunger," contributions from churches and other local organizations and a cash balance at the start of the new fiscal year on April 1.

The 1973-74 budget represents an increase of more than $35,000 over this year's budget. Bruce Newton, center director, explained the increase is necessary to finance a full-time employment person at the center, hire a third outreach worker and finance the Operation Nutrition program for seven months after federal funding is cut off.

Of the center's budget approximately $80,000 will be used for personnel and the remaining $50,000 for non-personnel expenses.

The center also hopes to establish a $15,000 contingency fund this year. This would be used if federal funds are cut off during the year to help phase out programs gradually or until programs could be taken over by other agencies, said Newton.

NEWTON EXPLAINED the $62,000 in federal funds will be allotted to the center by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity provided the money is there. President Richard M. Nixon in his budget message has stated he would like to phase out all OEO funding by July and make this a local responsibility to be taken care of through revenue sharing funds. The budget is now before Congress.

"We are really in a crisis position," said Newton.

Newton said if the federal funding is cut off the center would probably go to the six townships it serves and municipalities in those townships and ask them to make up the difference.

In determining how much to ask from each municipality the center divided the number of persons served by the center this year, more than 1,700 into $32,000. This came out to $19.06. The number of persons from each municipality was then computed and multiplied by $19.06.

THE FUNDING requests are: Arlington Heights, 241 persons, $4,593.46; Wheeling, 137 persons, $2,611.22; Barrington, 36 persons, $686.16; Palatine 274 persons, $5,222.44; Hanover Park, 58 persons, $1,105.48; Roselle, 26 persons, $495.56; Schaumburg, 25 persons, $476.50; Streamwood, 90 persons, $1,715.40; Des Plaines, 183 persons, $3,487.98; Hoffman Estates, 66 persons, $1,257.96; Rolling Meadows, 129 persons, $2,458.74; Elk Grove Village, 65 persons, $1,238.90; Prospect Heights, 14 persons, $266.84; Mount Prospect, 105 persons, $2,001.30 and other, 250 persons, $4,765.

Last year the center attempted to raise $25,000 from area municipalities served by the center. Arlington Heights and Hoffman Estates were the only villages to contribute directly but Palatine officials set up a fund for the center. Approximately $5,000 was contributed by municipalities last year.

Newton is optimistic that municipalities will be more responsive this year because of the additional funds they have received from revenue sharing and because federal funding for the center is in jeopardy.

Among the services the center offers are adult education, legal assistance, operation nutrition, emergency food, family planning and income tax aid.

Six to seek 3 library board posts

by CINDY TEW

Six residents will seek three Arlington Heights Memorial Library Board seats in the April election. Nominations to the posts were closed Monday.

Incumbent Roland J. Ley, John Patrick O'Brien and Philip D. Jones will vie for two six-year seats while James Foster, Lois Davidheiser and Audrey Rieder will compete for a four-year term.

Natalie Wallace, currently president of the board, decided not to run for another term. Her six-year term expires in April. Charles Edward resigned from the board last month, thus creating a four-year vacancy.

CANDIDATES FOR six-year terms include:

• Ley, 1519 N. Hickory. He was appointed to the board about three years ago to fill a vacancy and was elected to the position in April, 1970. He is currently treasurer of the board.

Ley, 40, has been a member of the Hasbrook Civic Association and the village form of government committee. He has six children.

• O'Brien, 520 N. Haddon. He has been an attorney in Arlington Heights for 11 years and served as an assistant state's attorney for two years.

O'Brien said he is running for the board on the urging of some neighbors who circulated his nominating petition for him.

"My two oldest children use the library a lot, and I am distressed at the thought of an appointive board. Even a bad election is better than an appointed board because taxpayers should have a say in their library," O'Brien said.

O'Brien, 51, said that his experience in business administration would apply to running a library.

"I'm not planning to get into this like a knight on a white horse. I've seen a marked improvement in the library service over the past several years and would like to see things keep moving in that same direction," said O'Brien who has lived in the village 22 years.

• Jones, 947 N. Kennicott. He is the administrative manager of R. L. Ringwood, a sales representative company in Chicago, and has two children.

Jones, 32, is the state director of the Arlington Heights Jaycees, a member of the board of directors of St. Simons Episcopal Church and, with his wife Beverly, is a co-leader of a Girl Scout cadette troop.

"I think my business administration experience will lend itself to the library board job," said Jones. "I want to participate in community activities and I think the community could use me in this spot."

CANDIDATES for the four-year term are:

• Mrs. Davidheiser, 420 E. Park. She has recently worked full-time at the library but resigned to spend more time with her family. During her eight months of employment, Mrs. Davidheiser was assistant head of circulation.

Mrs. Davidheiser, 43, has lived in the village for 10 years and has two daughters. She has been a Girl Scout leader and has a degree in business administration.

"I have had experience with our library that I think would be helpful for a board member to have," said Mrs. Davidheiser. "We have a fine library and I would like to see it stay that way."

• Foster, 1416 N. Walnut. He is an accountant for a Chicago firm.

Foster is a member of Olive PTA, a member of the School Dist. 25 Nominating Committee's screening committee, a former member of the Arlington Heights Park District's referendum committee and the committee chairman of Cub Scout Pack 169. He is also an elder of the Palatine Presbyterian Church and the head of the church's finance committee.

Foster, 34, has three children and has lived in the village for two years.

"I was disappointed to see so few people running for the board and would hate to see the jobs left to appointment," said Foster who also said he would like to see more library and school district coordination. "I would like to see more innovations at the library to get more people to use the facilities."

• Mrs. Rieder, 1717 W. Grove. She has had a lifetime interest in cultural arts.

Mrs. Rieder, 43, has four children and has lived in the village for 10 years. She is currently the cultural arts chairman of South Junior High School PTA.

"As a family, we have used the library to the fullest and greatly appreciate its fine facilities," said Mrs. Rieder. "I'm delighted by the recent purchase of a bookmobile and would like to do my part to support the library by serving on the board."

Open Caucus? Don't you believe it

tioning," by or in behalf of the candidates.

The spirit of the bylaws goes toward prohibiting any campaign from being conducted. "The office seeks the man rather than the man seeking the office."

In reality, the prohibition is a farce. Some candidates and their supporters, recognizing glaring loopholes in the bylaws, conducted organized campaigns. Others try to play the game fairly and, thus, suffer a marked disadvantage.

The by-laws prohibit a candidate from soliciting votes on his own. If he has knowledge of a campaign in his behalf he is to report it and discourage it. If he has knowledge.

Prior to the second public meeting this year, a telephone campaign reportedly was waged in the behalf of one of the successful trustee candidates. A second candidate, this one unsuccessful, is known to have solicited support for himself, via telephone.

An organized telephone campaign was waged against Madeline Schroeder by persons who believed her to be "soft" on low and moderate-income housing. She was defeated.

Words of support or disfavor were expressed even at the level of the Candidate Recommendation Committee — before the committee reached the voting stage and before they were to discuss candidates.

Al Lindsey, who chaired the recommendation committee in 1971 and the acknowledged leader of several homeowners' groups, offered amendments to the bylaws at the first meeting, aimed at opening the caucus for greater exposure of candidates prior to the second meeting. Lindsey argued the candidates should be exposed to the public so that voters would know how to vote on the final caucus slate.

His efforts were largely unsuccessful. His proposed 14-day period for the candidates to express their views, was limited to five days. To demonstrate its openness, the caucus produced 11 of the 12 candidates for questioning at a press conference. However, at least one candidate was prevented from expressing a view on a topic when William Griffith, chairman of the recommendation committee, ruled the answer constituted "electioneering."

LINDSEY CLEARLY demonstrated the loopholes in the by-laws on electioneering when, prior to the second meeting, he distributed to homes in Arlington Heights a list of the candidates supported by the association's Legislative Committee.

Lindsey demonstrated the ineffective nature of the prohibition by openly campaigning for: Palmatier for village president; and Griffin, Harms, Durava, George and Norman Breyer for trustees. When Walsh defeated Palmatier for the top spot, the list for trustees was changed to include Palmatier instead of Breyer.

While mocking the caucus by-laws, Lindsey was simultaneously successful in helping get all his trustee selections slated.

If the electioneering prohibitions constitute the greatest illusion of the caucus, the greatest irony is reflected in the pretense that the system is open and secret at the same time.
